A Revolution

(Con. from page 9, column 5)

let that happen? Otherwise nobody is against it. I don't think it really makes a bit of difference to them.

What are the co-ed's reactions?

Emmy: They think it's terrific. They really like the whole idea. All the kids at Murray House are happy for me.

Sue: Everybody seems to think it's fine. There is certainly no opposition, even if there is some criticism.

Carol: They told me it would be hard but they know I realize this and they are happy that I'm being an individual. They are happy that somebody is finally going into forestry. They ask questions and I try to answer them. There is certainly no hard feelings from any of the girls.

Apparently there have been several females at U.N.B. who have taken this course and have failed to succeed. What do you think of your chances for success?

Emmy: The Dean said that there was no reason why not. He told us there would be problems but they could be surmounted. There are, of course, pitfalls and traps that we don't know about yet. With help and lots of study I'm sure that I can overcome both the traps and pitfalls. There are three of us which is not as bad as one against the whole faculty. You cannot cringe under social pressures.

Sue: Everything seems rather ominous right now. All I know is that I'm willing to learn and try my very best. It's not going to be rosy and I think we all know this which is a step in the right direction I hope.

Carol: If the Dean has accepted us into the faculty, he must think we're able to succeed. Here we are so what we do from now on academically or otherwise is our own individual decision. I really cannot see why all three of us can't obtain our degrees.

There will probably be questions about losing your femininity in such a profession. I would like to draw a parallel here. This is a situation similar to that of a male nurse. Do you think he loses masculinity? Would you like to date a male nurse? What are your feelings about this situation?

Emmy: It is fine with me. This is what the man is. I think he's a great guy. I would date him. Why not? He's a boy which I would date. I certainly would not hesitate because he's a male nurse.

Sue: It doesn't make any difference?

Brunswickan: Do you think you are going to lose your femininity?

Emmy: Absolutely not. I'm not going to try to keep my femininity in the physical sense. It's never been my ambition.

Sue: No.

Carol: No.

Brunswickan: Do you own an axe?

Emmy: Yes, I own an axe. I could chop a tree out of my yard but I don't feel I am going to have to be an axe man.

Sue: I can use an axe. I am not going to. What is the point? I am not a man. I am not trying to be.

Carol: Sure, but I feel the same as the others. That's the real thing in forestry. It's just the layman's idea of a profession.

Brunswickan: Do you think you are being truly realistic?

Emmy: I think so. I am realistic about an ideal.

Sue: I am going, as are Carol and Emmy, to overcome any problems involved. We are all willing to learn and be helped by anyone who is willing to help us. I know, at least I know, I want and I am trying to be realistic about getting it.

Carol: I never thought it was so different. As far as I am concerned there is nothing idealistic about it. I know what I want and what I eventually want to do. I am what I am up against. I hope to overcome the problem by academic ability.

Brunswickan: Is there anything you would like to say to your fellow students?

Emmy: Yes! Haalpp! Just be accepted. Nevertheless, criticism does encourage me.

Sue: Understanding and tolerance of our mistakes.

Carol: I want to be treated equally.

Bumper by Houdeille Industries

Nickel chrome plating takes it all with a grain of salt

Winter goes to war on automobiles, with snow, ice and road salt. But modern automobiles fight back. Take the bumpers, for example. They are finished with multi-layer nickel chrome. It resists corrosion. Keeps bumpers looking new for a long time. And in this new, improved automobile bumper finish, nickel's contribution is quality.
