My dear Harry:

I share with you the feeling of surprise at Hepburn's speech in St. Thomas, and also agree with your view on inflation. I am afraid that Hepburn is conveying to many the impression that he has not the balance of judgment which is required for sound and safe leadership, and anything other than wise direction at this time is sure to make the present condition worse than it is. I am sorry he went as far as he did at St. Thomas, for I fear it will cost him many more supporters than he will gain. Up to the present he has been making pretty good headway.

I thank you for letting me see the January number of the Journal of the Canadian Bankers Association, and I shall return it in the course of a few days.

With fondest love to you all,

Ever affectionately yours,

P.S. I have meant at different times to tell Jennie of George Duncan's death in Scotland about two months ago. She might like to send Ethlie Duncan a line. Her address is the Kenniston Apartments, Elgin St., just above where Max lived. George had been in poor health for a year or so past, - but was able to take the communion WLMK/z service the Sunday before.
