nal Proof

chairs, table, pedestal, vase of flowers, zither, bell, tambourine, four heavy poles supporting a curtained canopy, and other articles, were seized by invisible hands and piled one upon another somewhat in the figure of an inverted pyramid, the whole supported at a sharp angle by the close juxtaposition of two legs of the four-legged table and two legs of a chair. The law of gravitation was not subverted but so delicately balanced was this pile of furniture that a touch caused it to sway.

CUI BONO?

This query, sometimes put in a spirit of flippant ridicule and sometimes in all sincerity by an honest sceptic, is satisfactorily answered forever by one intelligent glimpse of the stupendous purpose behind such manifestations, viz., to give absolute proof of the presence and power of a spiritual intelligence. Thus, the ringing of a bell by a spirit desiring to communicate is an intelligent means used to attract the attention of the embodied listener, just as truly as is the
