Butter

The English butter market steady at an advance of 2s, but no Canadian is offering there. The Trade Bulletin has this to say of last week's butter trade:

"The butter market is divided into two sections. That pertaining to choice fresh new milk creamery is firm, owing to scarcity of supp sales of which have been made to day at 21 1/c to 22c; but the outside figure is difficult to get except for anything fancy in small tubs, 21½c being a fair, top figure, and we quote 21c to 21½c. The market for the other section which comprises secondary grades of winter and fall creamery, is weak and lower, in fact demoralized, with sales all the way from 20 /c down to 19c, and even 181/2c and 18c has been accepted for the least desirable qualities. These figures show a drop of 11/4c to 11/4c in about four weeks. The low grades of dairy are pretty well all worked off. Creameries that intended to start on the new season on April 1, commenced about March 15 to 20, and those intending to commence on April 15, will start on April 1, owing to the season coming on earlier than was
