What Forest Fires Cost Canada in 1916.

Canada has lost through forest fires in 1916 over nine million dollars. This equals more than six times what has been spent on forest protection work from coast to coast.

The enormous sum wasted through this year's forest fires, most of which were preventable, would add another $180 to the first year's pension allowances of nearly 19,000 Canadian soldiers.

It is noteworthy that while some parts of the Dominion owe to rainy weather their immunity from fire damage, the season's record proves beyond gainsay that in areas where first-rate fire protection systems were in operation, losses of life and property were held down to a remarkable minimum.

Quebec had some heavy fires in the Lake St. John and Saguenay districts, also in Gaspé Peninsula and west of Escalana on the Transcontinental Railway. It is a striking fact, however, that within the 24,000 square miles of Quebec, covered by the two well-organized associations of limit holders, the amount of green timber burnt is practically negligible. This immunity was not a matter of luck but of consistent, patient effort to educate settlers, lumberjacks and others in care with fire, coupled with a system of promptly reporting all outbreaks, and attacking forest fires in their incipency with large forces of men and modern equipment.

British Columbia faced fairly favorable fire conditions through the summer months, and the cost of fire fighting was reduced by about 75 per cent. over the record of 1915. The number of fires was about half of last year. The British Columbia forest protection service is the most complete in Canada thus far, and the saving of timber is a logical consequence.

A heavy average of rainfall kept fire troubles at arm's length in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and this weather condition was undoubtedly responsible for the escape of the main areas of big timber throughout Ontario. The Clay-belt fires at the end of July and first week of August provided a tragic sacrifice of 262 lives, and what is estimated to be six million dollars worth of property. There was practically no forest guarding organization in the fire-swept district, except along the railway track.

New Brunswick escaped the risks of 1916 with a very small timber loss, Nova Scotia having a similar experience. The records of the Dominion Railway Board show that the private-owned railway lines of Canada have not been responsible this year for any damaging forest fires. Those that were started were promptly extinguished by railway employees.

Questions and Answers. Veterinary.

Stumbling Horse.
1. When my five-year-old horse trots he seems to become dizzy and stumbles. When walking or hitched to a plow he is all right.
2. For a year he has had the habit of getting his fore feet into the manger at nights when idle. I have the manger as high as is convenient for him to feed out of it, and have tried tying him short and other means, but cannot break him of the habit.

L. M.

Ans.—1. We do not think he is suffering from any disease, or that he really becomes dizzy, but simply stumbles by reason of awkward and lazy movement. If driven up sharp and forced to pay attention when trotting it is probable he will not stumble. There is no brain trouble that will consistently interfere with a horse when trotting and not when walking.

2. We can suggest nothing more than you have done except building the manger so high that he cannot get his feet into it. If you could give him a box stall without a manger it would be the best treatment, or take the manger out of his stall and feed him off the floor, but build a small box for grain in one corner, so high that he will not be able to reach it with his feet.
