Pure Bred Poultry From A Commercial Aspect

(Adopted from Lewis Wright) It is a surprising fact that even at this time when breeds and strains of poultry have been brought to a very high stage of perfection, there are many poultry raisers who still cling devotedly to the idea that they secure the best results in their poultry keeping by crossing breeds or raising mongrel chickens. They will make statements of very decided character in support of their position—to the effect that they secure harder stock or that they get more eggs, or fatten of all, that it is necessary to change the blood every year to keep up the vigor of the flock, and to them changing the blood usually means changing the breed of the parent male. This fallacy is always most difficult to expel. To inculcate the idea of operating with a pure breed and of working along definite lines of development, is a slow process. Let us however briefly argue the advantages of the pure bred as opposed to the mongrel stock above mentioned. To begin then, if we keep one breed well defined and pure, we insure uniformity of appearance and of product. If eggs be the product desired then we get eggs, uniform in size, and even in color, a desideratum surely. If dressed poultry is the product we require, we secure that uniformity of quality and appearance which makes for speedy sales. How often has the careful buyer hesitated about purchasing a pair of chickens because she feared that the size of the larger bird didn't quite make up for the weakness of the other. Another strong argument for pure breeds, and against the mixed flock is this. In all breeding it must be remembered that the faults as well as the good points of a parent tend to be reproduced, and it is a well known fact that the good points of different breeds being themselves of different character usually neutralize each other, while the faults are a general thing accentuated. Darwin has clearly proved that every crossing between alien breeds has a tendency to produce reversion to past types. So that to sum this argument tersely—to breed pure stock is to advance toward some definite goal, to cross-breed different types is to start a retrograde movement—while to mix breeds indiscriminately (as so often seen) is to tempt nature to produce freaks and follies of all sizes shapes, colors and characters. The third and last argument is this. If it is desirable to develop a strain of fowls that will excel along one or more lines, this is possible only when a solid foundation of purity of breed. This is demonstrated by consideration of the fowl that have been developed to satisfy special demands. The flesh breeds in England, the Dorking and the Brahma in France, the Houdan, and the Favrolle. The egg producers, the egg laying contests of England and America have been won every time by fowls of pure breed, the highest egg records ever made are all held by pure bred hens. The highest type of general purpose fowl yet raised for either English or American markets are pure bred Wyandottes, Rocks, Orpingtons and Reds, etc. To encourage the production of uniformity, poultry stock having well established characteristics and good qualities, is then, the office of every self-respecting poultry association. To make it possible for beginners and others to secure foundation stock, having in purity the qualities demanded, is the duty of such associations, and best is the community which has the most honest, active organization of this kind. In Brant County we have one of the most progressive of Poultry Associations, a list of the officers being published in a recent issue of this paper. ### JEWEL BOX ROBBERY

Accused Thief Who Would Not Give His Fals Away for £500

Ingenuous Trick Which Led to a Haul of £3,500

By means of a cleverly planned trick an iron bound box containing jewels to the value of £3,500 was stolen from King's Cross Station on the Great Northern line on Tuesday. A reward of £500 pounds was offered for the recovery of the property, and by smart detective work nearly the whole of the valuables were recovered on Thursday. Three men were charged on Thursday with the theft and remanded. The box was left at the parcels office on Monday night by Messrs. Freeman, Jewellers, of Charterhouse Buildings, City Road. Some time later a boy, wearing the uniform of a District Messenger, called, gave him name of the firm who had consigned the box, and was allowed to have it removed from the office to the cloak room "to be called for."

Thieves had telephoned to one of the West End offices of the District Messenger Company, and when, in response to the call, a boy went to the hotel, he was handed a card bearing the name of Messrs. Freeman, and was given instructions to have the box removed from one department to the other. The box was transferred to the messenger boy being given a receipt which he handed to the person who had given him the card with Freeman's name on it. The next move in the skillful game was the appearance at the cloak room of station at an early hour on Tuesday of a cabman, who presented the receipt for the box which had been given to the messenger boy. The cabman unsuspectingly removed the box.

Subsequently Mr. H. Freeman, who had intended traveling to Grantham with the box samples called at the parcels office and presented the original ticket, given to his firm's representative when the box was deposited, and to his dismay he learned what had occurred. The goods included a number of spoons, teapots, snuff-boxes, cream jugs, sugar baskets, coffee pots, and entree dishes. The names of the accused men are—Charles Schriever, a clerk in the office of Mr. Freeman and living at Canterbury-road, Leyton-road, Essex, James, aged twenty-two, a dealer, formerly in Mr. Freeman's service; and Frank Keekler, a chauffeur, of Sutherland-road, Bow. Divisional Detective-Inspector Neil explained to the jury, with Captain Callard chief of the Great Northern Railway police, he took up the inquiry with reference to the missing jewels. He went to the parcels office at Liverpool-street Station on Wednesday morning, where he saw a trunk and a bag containing a large quantity of silver goods, which had since been identified. He said to James, who was in custody, "I am a police inspector. I understand that you claim this trunk and bag." James replied in the affirmative. Witness said they contained "the part proceeds of a robbery of jewelry and silver to the value of about £2,000, stolen from the King's Cross Great Northern Railway Company's office."

James replied, "Yes, I did the job. I was not alone. I will tell you about it later." He also said, "Send someone for my two bags. I have left them with the porter." These two cases were found to be full of jewelry. About 10.30, continued the witness, he went to Charterhouse Buildings and saw Schriever. He told him that he had arrested James, and should also take him into custody for being concerned in the matter. Schriever said, "Yes, I was made to do this by James. I will tell you my story."

In the afternoon witness saw Keekler, who said, "Yes; I ought to have known better. I was drawn into it, and when I realized what they were doing it was too late. I had to go on. I assisted to break open the case, which I afterwards burned. I saw in last night's paper a reward of £500. I was a fool not to come forward, but I could not give a pal away."

The men were remanded, as stated.

UNFORTUNATE BOOK-MAKERS.

The bookmakers will have cause to remember Wednesday's Derby for some time to come. Many paid out over Craganour in the first instance, and then again when Aboyer was returned as the winner. After Reiff, who passed the post first on Craganour, had weighed in, the "All Right" signal was certainly given by somebody in the enclosure. The authorities have not discovered who it was, but they say it was not an official.

The number went up, and as the stewards were slow in posting the objection, many bookmakers paid out on Craganour, unaware, that anything was amiss. One man disbursed £500. In the chief rings, news of the objection quickly spread, and the bookmakers suspended business, but those outside paid on the tickets for the favorite.

MISS DAVIDSON'S RECORD

How She Stood a Water Hose Siege in a Manchester Goal.

Miss Emily Wilding Davidson was born at Blackheath about thirty-five years ago, but lived at Longhorsley, Northumberland, and was a B.A. (Honors) of London University. Since she joined the W. S. P. U. in 1906 she had earned the following sentences for militant achievements: March 30, 1909—One month for obstruction. July 30, 1909—Two months for obstruction at Limehouse. Sept. 4, 1909—Two months for stone-throwing at White City, Manchester. Nov. 19, 1910—One month for breaking window in House of Commons. 10, 1912—Six months for firing pillar boxes at Holloway. Nov. 30, 1912—Ten days for assault at Aberdeen upon a Baptist minister whom she mistook for Mr. Lloyd George.

Miss Davidson has hunger-struck upon each occasion that she has been in the prison, Strangeways Gaol, Manchester, she was placed in a cell containing two plank beds, and she promptly barricaded the door with the planks. The barrack was strengthened with a wedge—on which she sat—constructed out of a stool, shoes and hat brush, so effectively that the prison officials were powerless to open the door. The cell window was broken, and through this a hose was turned upon her, but she clung to the bed boards and refused to move. Eventually the bell door was removed from the hinges. Soon afterwards she was released by order of the Home Secretary. In 1910 she won a case against the visiting magistrates of the prison. During her imprisonment last year she threw herself down the stairs of the prison, sustaining injuries which caused her to be released a few days before the expiration of her sentence. On three occasions she has hidden in the House of Commons, the places of concealment including the hot-air shaft and the crypt.

£2,000 GEM ROBBERY.

Bricks Submitted for Diamonds on a Train Journey.

By an audacious trick, Mr. A. Brown, a Hatfield garden diamond merchant, has been robbed of diamonds and other jewels, valued at upwards of £2,000, whilst travelling from Manchester to London. He is of the opinion that he was shadowed by three men. The jewels were in a bag, which Mr. Brown placed on the railway carriage rack. During his temporary absence between Derby and Leicester another bag, containing bath bricks, was substituted for Mr. Brown's which it resembled. Mrs. Brown, who went to meet her husband, told a curious story of seeing in a refreshment bar at St. Pancras three men in conversation, whose description tallies exactly with those given by Mr. Brown, of the three individuals whom he saw on his journey.

The following is the official list of the stolen jewelry: Four black leather cases, two containing diamond rings and two diamond and coloured stone rings, about twenty cases each containing six diamond and coloured stone rings, all stock-marked and initialed "A. B.," several single sapphire brooches, several single diamond pins, an opal pendant, several miniature brooches, a wallet containing a quantity of uncut diamonds, four or five parcels of cut diamonds, two parcels of sapphires, six dozen nine carat brooches, and an assortment of nine carat pearl pendants. Mr. Brown's property was only partly insured.

Sensational Evidence Given at Beemer Case in Woodstock

But The Witness Does Not Believe That Woman Poisoned Husband

(Canadian Press Despatch) WOODSTOCK, Ont., June 16

With the case of the crown against Mrs. Beemer, charged with having given strychnine to her husband, F. Beemer, concluded, it appeared tonight that there were not a few points upon which a jury would require enlightenment before convicting. For instance, there was no evidence that there was any strychnine in Beemer house or that they had bowed any from the neighbors. It was nothing to show that the man had any reason for killing his husband and the crown's own witnesses swore that they had no head of them living any way happily. There was, according to same witnesses nothing against Mrs. Beemer's manner after her husband's death. She had nothing to financially by his death, as his acre farm was heavily mortgaged, will be lost now, it was stated; she is left with eight small children. It was said by Dr. Woolmer, who attended Beemer that she apparently cared for her husband faithfully and there was no evidence that Beemer had the slightest suspicion that his wife was, as charged, the author of his illness.

The defence, which will be sent on Monday, June 30, will probably endeavor for to prove the probability is strong that O'Neil committed suicide. Beemer had a wife and his financial affairs were in a desperate condition. Mrs. Beemer's husband was hopelessly mortgaged and his brother, Sylvie had told her he might land in court for having a second mortgage with the first one still due. Nine years ago he was arrested, two years ago his house in London was sold. In the years he had been engaged in the two legal actions ranging from poor to high court, all arising out of father's estate, and some brought by his own relatives, all that work had to be done. However, that Fred was not of a despicable disposition.

DISEASE SEEMS TO BE SPREADING

Crazy Male Suffragette Committed Suicide at Ascot Races To-Day

ASCOT, Eng., June 19.—Fired the example of Miss Emily Wilding Davidson during the race for the Derby, a male suffragette to-day committed suicide by flinging himself from the front of August Belmont's four year old Tracey, during the race for valuable Ascot gold cup, and depriving the horse of any chance of capturing the coveted trophy.

The man was killed on the ground. The horse and its rider, although they were both brought to ground, were unscathed.

Waving a flag of the suffragettes in one hand, and brandishing a revolver in the other, the militant suffragist sprang over the rails as the field of eight horses with Tracey leading, were nearing stretch for home.

With a loud yell of "stop", Tracey collided with and felled before the jockey, A. Whalley, time to avert the catastrophe.

Tracey is son of the famous English stallion, Rock Sand, for whom Mr. Belmont paid $125,000, while dam is Toplary, a mare exported from England. The colt finished in the derby at Epsom in 1912, won the Sussex stakes at Goodwood July of the same year and the Ledger stakes at Doncaster in September, 1912.

A Good Majority.

A well-known English surgeon imparting some clinical instruction to a dozen students. Pausing at the bedside of a doubtful case, he said "Now gentlemen, do you think this or is not a case for operation?"

One by one each student made diagnosis, and all of them answered in the negative.

"Well, gentlemen, you are wrong," said the wielder of scalpel, "and I shall operate tomorrow."

"No you won't," said the patient as he rose in his bed; "six to one a good majority; gimme my clothes."
