YEARS.

 Music Halls of 40 Years Ago

In the palmy days of music halls there was go curtain, not the barest suggestion of teenery, scarcely a platform. The music hall forty years ago was a much simpler, home-lier place. Space did not matter; you sat about at tables and drink at your case from pewter poist, as fashion then demanded. R was a great honor to drink with the "chair-man," the persident of the assembly, an bonor to which only a regular guest ceald aspire. The performers did not rush in for a "turn" at a flicker of a number dial, but but were announced with solemn majesty by the autocratic chairman, after he had rapped for silence with his mallet. It was more of a friendly smoking room consert than a show, but were announced with solemit indexity of the autocratic chairman, after he had rapped for silence with his mallet. It was more of a friedly smoking room concert than a show, mays the London Daily Mail. Our music hall is becoming overcivilized, and losse its grip. At the old Canterbury the performers all used to line us on the platform and sing a ratiling opening chorus, while the audience applauded with pewters and aticks and boots with unrestrained ardor. It was the same sort of thing as the Christy minatries, and the comic man used to take the side, just as the "corner man." Makeup was scarcely ever athempted. A song stood of fell on its own merits and the skill of the singers. The "great" Vance who introduced the "howling sweil" to the halls, used to swarger about the platform, dropping clik handkerchiefs to show his fillimitable wealth. The impression of reckless prodigal-ity, moreover, in the "great". Vance was rather damped when his little page followed him ploking up the price2ess handkerchiefs. There were no drop curtain then. How many songs of the last ten years can one recall? There are very few, and those are perhaps the most stupid. But the comic songs of twenty years ago have almost taken a place in the language. Some of them are household words. Who has not heard of Predetick Bowyer's: They're all very fine and large, They're the widest in creation, And I make no extra charge. Now, who'll haves chance for a dozen or two. They're the widest in creation, And I make no extra charge. Now, who'll haves chance for a dozen or two. They're all very fine and large? The encore verse is the old, old landlady chesimut, but fung still: I thought I'd go to Margate once

They're all very fine and large? The encore verse is the old, old landlady chestaut, but funny still: I thought I'd go to Margate once For rest, and change of alr, But, oh! I losf some pounds of fiesh The few days I was there. I couldn't get a wink of sleep, I sha'n't forget that bed, The landlady said: "Do you like the rooms?" I paid my bill and said: "They're all very fine and large, etc. Another classic that is acarcely dead yet is "Up I Came With My Little Lot." Indeed It has been sung quite recently with great celat. When "the handy man" marched their Long Tom up to Ladysmith and got it into position, this is what they shang (Capt. Scott will not deny the fact). Up I came with my little lot, The air turned blue for miles. The scene is a swearing match at a bean-feast in Epping Forest-The trees all shook.

The trees all shock. The bobby took his hook, And down came all the tiles. The donkey he began to bray As if his heart would break, And even Dick Dunn went and told every one That my lot took the cake. But the early days of music hall were not monopolized by the comis song. Sentiment also had a turn-crude, simple sentiment per-haps, but quite as palatable as a magnific-ently staged bijou melodrama. Mr. Bowyer's "I Stood on the Bridge at Midnight" is an instance.

Next a form approaches at a halting pace, Grief had failed to shatter the beauty of h face: Promises and falsehoods fondly she believed Now her dream is ended, forsaken and de

Like an apparition, on the bank she stands. "Why did he forsake me? Him I loved so well: Hark! the bell is tolling Bidding earth farewell." Frantically her hands high In the air she throws, A sigh, a leap, a scream, 'tis done! As o'er the bridge she goes. It reads a little sloppy perhaps, but Chas. Godfroy could make people shudder, and sob when he sang it. One of the first halls was the New Music Hall in Hungerford Market. There you heard a wonderful collection of the English ballads such as to-day you might chance to hear at the Queen's Hall. Younger readers may think it strange that half a century ago such at the Queen's Hall. Younger readers may think it strange that half a century ago such classics as "The Blue Bells of Scotland" and "The Last Rose of Summer" were sung at the music hall; that the Shakesperian lyrics were still regarded as national songs and performed on the nightly performance to an enthusiastic music hall songs had one advan-tage over the modern, which might easily

"Those poor wardrobe women," re-marked one of the ladies as she glaneed at them, "have all the drudgery of this life, haven't they? I can understand the consistion of the clitter and times! of fascination of the glitter and tinsel of the arena, but I pity the unfortunate creatures who do these commonplace things in the obscure regions of the place."

He did not explain that the hosiery repairer was with the circus because she was one of the best bare back riders in the world, that the other incredible. I rubbed in all sorts of em-brocations, lotions, salves, etc., as you can tell from the fact that I had at one time as many as thirty-two empty bot-tles or boxes of one kind of ordinary ointment in the house! I was almost willing to try anything to get my leg better, but it would never have got better at all but for the wonderful ef-fect of Zam-Buk." back riders in the world, that the other two had international reputations as a tight rope walker and a juggler re-spectively. Besides his guests had seen these three women but a short time be-fore in all the glory of pink and gold and if they did not recognize their erst-while entertainers it was not the guide's fault.

No women who work for money are nore simple in their tastes, more domes-tic in their habits than those who add the charm of feminine loveliness to the a torture even to hobble about. I felt that something serious was going to happen, for my condition was beyond description. A friend of mine remark-ed, 'Why don't you try Zam-Buk ? I really think it would do you good.' I got some and the result is too wonderful for words. From first rubbing it in I the charm of feminine loveliness to the daring features of a circus programme. In the crowded tent they dash about in a blaze of color because "She act goes better" that way. Spangles and tim-sel, rouge and powder form the frame-work of "swell dressing" both in the traditions of the tent and in the minds for words. From first rubbing it in I could feel the good effects of the balm, for the pain gradually died away, the heat and swelling went down, and I seemed to have a freer use of my leg. Several ladies at the church, including the minister's wife, hearing what Zam. of the hand-clapping, peanut-eating mul-titudes who ccupy the circus seats. But when the beautiful fairy descends from her horse, trapeze or wire and returns to her dressing-room, she puts her "hoop-la" manner on the shelf with her tights and the trappings of her profesthe minister's wife, hearing what Zam-Buk was at last curing me, helped me with a little money, so that I might con-tinue with it, and the result of their sion. Her ordinary raiment restores her quiet womanliness and long before her admirers of the arena have reached their kindness is that, by persevering with Zam-Buk, I am now quite cured. I do not suffer the slightest inconvenihomes she is busy about the duties of that little section of the great caravan which constitutes her household and in which she is as proud and happy as any ence, and can get about to do my house-work without difficulty. This is sim-ply the result of using Zam-Buk, and let them of the blessing it has been to me." It is by working such cures as the above that Zam.Buk has won for itself she is with her parents, who are also performers. If married, her husband is sure to be a member of the gigantic or-ganization and if her children are of such a splendid reputation. In the Old Country, in Australia, in India, in South Africa and other countries, it is the favorite household balm and the proper age they are doing something on the great programme. For circus per-formers are a caste. They inherit their the favorite household balm and the one most widely used. It cures cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, pimples, running sores, spreading scabs, scalp diseases, poisoned wounds, festering sores, piles, ulcers, bad legs, abscesses, boils, ring-worms. erysipelas, scrofula, barber's rash, blackheads, acne, stiffness, rheu-matism and all injured, diseased, or in-flamed conditions of skin and tissue. Of all druggists at 50 cents a box, or postcalling, intermarry among their kind, and bring up their children to follow the sawdust life. An enormous circus such as that of the Ringlings, has grown to be nothing else than a moving municipality and the equipment of the community life almost equals that for the performance itself. There is a hospital, a large library, a school with a kindergarten annex, a great nursery and a corps of maids who look after the little ones when mamma and papa are busy in the big tents. There s a large airy canvas house where sewing, chatting and even gossip can com-fort the feminine nature. There is ev-erything that modern civilization has made necessary for a well rounded woderstanding that he drove about in it "by way of advertisement." In one respect the comic songs of forty years back have been improved upon. Then the chorus was invariably "Tra-la-la, Diddle-diddle-dee," or some other similar gag. The songs in which the chorus is the principal charm are only a gradual development. One of the first was Mr. Bowyer's popular "Lit-le Bit of Sugar for the Bird." The chorus of this famous song was so adapted that it one to a song was so adapted that it ran to 320 verses, stanzas being added, to suit all occasions. The original words ran thus: When Dicky sits upon his perch When Dicky sits upon his perch And sings a little song.

There's a little bit of sugar for the bird. Some would call it bribery And say it's very wrong,
That little bit of sugar for the bird. Now ladles are like dicky birds,
For when they sing and play,
The men are so enraptured, they are carried clean away.
They lavish diamonds on them; if you ask them they will say-
