

COMPLETELY PROSTRATED.

A Quebec Farmer Tells How He Was Restored From Almost Hopeless Suffering to Complete Health.

Mr. Wm. Goodard, a well known farmer living near Knowlton, Que., says: "A few years ago my health gave way and I was completely prostrated. The least exertion would me up and make it difficult for me to breathe. I suffered from headache, had no appetite, and fell in weight until I was reduced to 130 pounds. Finally I grew so bad that I was forced to keep my bed, and remained there for several months. I was under the care of a good doctor, but he did not seem to help me. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I procured two boxes. When I had finished them I could at once much improvement as I would have stopped taking them but for the urging of my friend, who said that in my condition I could not expect to see immediate results. I continued taking the pills, and by the time I had taken a couple more boxes there was no doubt that they were helping me, and it needed no further persuasion to induce me to continue them. In the course of a few months I not only regained my health, but increased in weight fifty pounds. These results certainly justify the faith I have in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I strongly urge those who are weak and broken down to give them a fair trial. More weak and ailing people have been made strong and energetic by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than by any other means. They fill the veins with new, vigorous blood, and strengthen every nerve in the body. Sold by all dealers at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50, sent by mail by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Nerve is the most important factor in handling bees, and while they should be smoked into submission whenever they need it, they never should be smoked to excess, or just simply for the fun of it. Accordingly, it is valuable instruction to the beginner to visit occasionally some expert bee-keeper, and see for himself how the more intricate things are done. Why? Because bees require so much looking after and handling. It is sometimes desirable to take combs of brood from strong colonies to build up weaker ones in the spring, and often to take combs of brood and adhere bees from strong ones for making artificial colonies. Then all the queen cells but one may have to be cut out to prevent after swarms, after the prime swarms have been secured; while again, queen cells may have to be removed from the combs of colonies who have swarmed to supply queenless ones with queens when there are no laying queens to give them. Bees should not be handled too much, however, neither should the number of colonies be increased other than by natural swarming. Artificial swarming is work only for the professional. If the beginner attempts it, he is pretty sure to lose all, or nearly all, his bees, and consequently throw up the business sooner or later in disgust. The best time to start in with bees is during the spring, not earlier than April and not later than May; and when the colonies are received, they should be placed at once on the identical spot where one expects to have them remain, for changeable bees around to different locations on the premises never agree with them, and frequently will ruin them. Before going into bees, though, one should consider whether the conditions of his locality are adaptable to them. Some places afford good bee pasturage, while others do not. It is not strictly necessary that bees have pasturage very near by, but, all the same, they will do better when it is not too far away. A half mile is the best radius for them to work in, albeit they will often work at good advantage on anything within a mile and a half and two miles. If one is so situated that he must depend mostly on orchard trees and garden flowers for pasturage, my advice is that he let bees alone.

IN SPRING TIME

Paine's Celery Compound Is the Giver of Health and New Life to the Sick and Diseased.

Spring, with its bright sunshine, lengthening days, warm rains, and fresh promise of a new life in nature, is fast approaching and will be hailed with true delight by the old and young who are enjoying full health and local activity. To thousands the coming of spring means a fuller cup of joy and offering; it is a time when the dark grave claims many victims. When men and women are burdened with death-defying sickness, such as kidney disease, liver complaint, blood troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, and the terrible after effects of grippe, spring has no charm for them. They have allowed themselves to sink into a condition of misery and helplessness during the winter that must quickly terminate life, unless that true health and life giver, Paine's Celery Compound, be made use of without delay. The nervous system, weak and unstrung, must be fortified; the blood, sluggish, impure and watery, must be made clean and fast flowing, and every organ of digestion must be tuned up to true health pitch. Nature's wonderfully successful medicine, Paine's Celery Compound, does this good work as no other remedy can do. It acts as a nerve and brain food, it gives life to stagnant blood, it banishes pernicious kidney disease, liver complaint, dyspepsia and other troubles that make life a misery. The thousands of thankful letters received from Canada's best people are the best and strongest proof that Paine's Celery Compound cures. When your life is in danger do not be misled by common advertised medicines, so many of them are dangerous and unsafe. Ask for the blood that has cured your friends and neighbors—the kind that makes people well.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

Don't imagine that long hair will give you the strength of Samson, like Samson, you have a head for it to grow on.

Hi—There's that Smythe girl—she's going to sing "In Old Madril." She—It's really? What a relief! I was afraid she was going to sing here.

Mistress—Do you call this sponge cake? Why, it's as hard as it can be.

New Cook—Yes, mum, that's the way a sponge is before its wet. Soak it in your tea, mum.

Keep Minards Liniment in the house. Rembrandt Daubbs—May I paint your picturesque old barn, sir?

Farmer Jones—Go ahead, sonny, but I'd enough sight rather see 'a paint de behouse. It needs it most.

"And when I proposed to her she turned all colors of the rainbow at once." "How can you make such a ridiculous assertion?"

"All the colors at once, if you have not forgotten your high school lessons, make white."

"It must be hard for public men whose turn has come to explain how they came to be defeated."

"I answered Senator Sorghum, nervously, 'but not as hard as it is for some of 'em to explain how they came to get elected.'"

Ask for Minards and take no other. Mamma, when Willie has a toothache you take him to the dentist's to have it filled, don't you? asked Tommy.

Yes, dear, said mamma. Well, I've got a stomachache. Don't you think you'd better go to the candy store and get it filled?

An evening paper in an astronomical article gives directions for discovering the various constellations, including the Great Bear, which gives occasion for a light minded punster to remark that he has no desire at such a chilly time of the year to find the great bear. He would much rather see a good fire in it.

"I have invited several army officers," said the hostess, "and I am anxious that the occasion shall be something edifying and appropriate. I don't want anything commonplace, like a five o'clock tea or a pink tea or a violet tea."

"Well, suggested Miss Cayenne, after deliberation, "why not make it a beef tea?"

Minards Liniment is Used by Physicians. Mr Porter was a smart, brisk, middle aged bachelor. One day, at a lawn tennis party, he was introduced to a widow, who, by a curious chance happened to bear the same name as himself. He was quite equal to the occasion. "Mrs Porter," he exclaimed, "Bless me! The very lady I have been in search of all these years."

Small Boy—Pa, this is the day when the sausage comes out of its hole, ain't it? Paternal Ancestor—The sausage, my boy! What do you mean?

"Why, the sausage comes out of its hole to see if it can see its shadow, don't it?"

"Why, no, my boy; it is the ground hog that does that."

"Well, pa, it's all the same; the sausage is ground hog, ain't it?"

Minards Liniment Lumberman's Friend. At the wedding anniversary of a railway magnate one of the guests, noticing a somewhat lonely looking and rather shabbily attired man in one corner of the parlor, walked over and sat down near him.

"I was introduced to you," he said, "but I did not catch your name."

"My name," replied the other, "is Swaddelwood."

"Oh, then you are a relative of our host?"

"Yes," rejoined the poor relation, with a grin, "I'm his cousin, five hundred dollars removed."

DEAR SIRS.—I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism, and lately have been confined to my bed. Seeing your MINARD'S LINIMENT advertised, I scribble my restoration to health to the wonderful power of your medicine.

Conundrums. Why the figure nine like a peacock? Because it is nothing without its tail.

What is that which is bought by the yard and worn by the foot? A carpet.

Why is your nose in the middle of your face? Because it is the center.

When should shipwrecked sailors not be disheartened? When they're in the jolly-boat.

Why are kisses like the creation? Because they are made of nothing, and are very good.

Simple Home Cures. To cure a felon, mix an ounce of salicylic acid in boiling vinegar, dip the finger in frequently.

For a burn, mix borax water, olive oil and glycerine, equal parts, and apply freely, or dust immediately with powdered borax and cover carefully from the air.

For a strain, wrap the parts in a flannel cloth wrung out of water, and give absolute rest.

For earache, mix equal parts of laudanum and tincture of aconite, saturate a piece of wool with the mixture, and put in the ear.

For toothache, apply powdered alum, salt and borax, equal parts.

Trust the Children. Trust the children. Don't suspect them. Let your confidence direct them. At the hearth or in the wildwood Meet them on the plane of childhood.

Trust the little ones. Remember May is not like chill December. Let no words of rage or menace Check their happy notes of gladness.

Trust the little ones. You guide them, And, above all, decide them. Should they trip, or should they blunder, Let your snap-leave cords astouter.

Trust the children. Let them treasure Mother's faith in boundless measure, Father's love in their confiding; Then no secrets they'll be hiding.

Trust the children just as well. Who for "such" ones sweetly plead. Trust and guide, but never doubt them, Build a wall of love about them. —New York Ledger.

Scientific Temperance Instruction in Public Schools. FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Suppose you take a watch, full jeweled, of finest Geneva workmanship, and put it into a case made of gold, then into one made of silver, then into one made of porcelain. You will find that it keeps just as good time in a cheap case as in a costly one, because there is no interdependence between the watch and its environment. But God has wound up a watch in this snug, round box on the top of your head and mine, warranted with good usage, to tick right on with thoughts for eighty or a hundred years.

A watch with the main-spring of reason, the balance-wheel of judgment, the fine jewels of imagination and fancy, the dial plate of a human face and vision, and the pointer of a character divine, and this wonderful watch, the human brain, can not keep as good time in a coarse case as in a fine one, for there is the closest interdependence between the brain and its environment; between the tissues of the body and the temper of the soul.

Just as Theodore Thomas controls an orchestra with his baton, or an engineer his engine with the throttle-valve, or an operator his telegraph line, so the wonderful prisoner in the brain controls the body's intricate machinery. Given as much cerebral thought and you will get so much cerebral action. There is not an axiom of mathematics more fixed than this physical law. The man who can't think his own thoughts, though nobody hinders him; can't speak his own words though everybody wishes that he could; can't use his own five senses though they were given him for that specific purpose; and whose cruelty is greatest towards those he loves best, presents towards those alcoholic drinks have no business in the economy of a well-ordered physical life; and the time is reached to let it rest as soon as a child's brain can take it in.

The Control of Thought. Don't think over the unpleasant thing, the unkind thing. You will be amazed to find how different your life will be after you have learned to keep your thoughts above unworthy, down-pulling, depressing circumstances. As the bird is held down by weights upon his wings, so is the soul kept from its native air by the weights of the earth. Refuse an entrance to the stinging thoughts that come swarming about you like wasps. If you can be with the first moment of waking, fix the mind upon the high, the sweet, the noble thought, thus putting a sentinel at the door, and keeping the inner door peaceful, pure, serene. Outside there may be clamor, insistence, determination to force an entrance, but keep the door locked and soon the earth noises will die away, and into the sweet silence heaven's music will steal.

Our happiness depends upon the continuance of this delicate harmony. But how easily it is drowned, disturbed, made discordant when we realize that the teachings of the Gospel are the only bases of true living, right living, happy living, that in them is found the heavenly philosophy, we shall study to make our lives conform to them.—Ed.

A Mother's Duty to Her Children. A mother's place is by no means an easy one, if she is truly interested in her children, for she must feel that all these virtues must be contained within herself if she accomplish her utmost with her child, says a writer in Trained Motherhood. Self-control is perhaps the most difficult attribute for a mother at all times, but one of the most important. Mothers cannot expect to see in their children unless the child is able to see the same in them. The first lesson may be given a little babe, as in its attempts to help itself it begins to climb and perhaps take a step, and down it goes. Its first inclination is to cry, but the wise mother, instead of smothering the little fellow up, running to the window, showing a favorite picture or something to divert his attention, will lovingly teach the little one to be brave.

As the tender bump comes to the little life, the being brave will grow upon him, until in later life he is prepared to face the more serious obstructions in his path with a brave heart and a dependence upon self, when a mother's hand can guide him through. The great trouble in the home of to-day is the arbitrary controlling of the child by the parents and the sudden throwing him upon his own responsibility when the suitable age appears. If parents do not watch for every opportunity to unconsciously implant self-control in the babe, the child, they cannot expect it to drop as a gift from heaven when he is placed where he must depend upon himself.—Ed.

The Fool's Prayer. The royal feast was done; the King sought some new sport to banish care And to his jester cried: "Sir Fool, kneel now and make for us a prayer!"

The jester doffed his cap and bawled, And stood the mocking court before, They could not see the bitter smile Behind the painted grin he wore.

He bowed his head and bent his knee Upon the monarch's silken stool; His pleading voice arose: "Oh, Lord, Be merciful to me, a fool!"

"No pity, Lord, could change the heat From red with wrongs to white as wool; The red must heal the skin; but, Lord, Be merciful to me, a fool!"

"The act by guilt the onward sweep Of truth and right, of Lord, we stay; 'Tis by our follies that so long We hold the earth from heaven away."

"These clumsy feet, still in the mire, O'er crushing blossoms without end; These hard, well-meaning hands we thrust Among the heart-strings of a friend."

"The ill-timed truth we might have kept, Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung. The word we had not sense to say, We know how grandly it had rung!"

"Our faults no tenderness should ask, The chastening stripes must cleanse them all. But for our blunder, oh, in shame Before the eyes of heaven we fall."

"Earth hath no balm for mistakes; Men crown the knave and scourge the fool. That did his will, but thou, O Lord, Be merciful to me, a fool!"

The room was hushed; in silence rose The King, and sought his chamber cool, And walked apart, and murmured low: "Be merciful to me, a fool!"

Princess Victoria, of Wales, is among the women who work, and the fact has leaked out in a curious way. At a recent exhibition of book covers prizes were awarded to "Miss Matthews," and not for some time was it discovered, even by her own family, that this was merely a pseudonym assumed by Princess Victoria to insure that her work should be judged solely on its own merits. Two years ago the Princess was only deterred by parental authority from becoming a hospital nurse, for which post she had qualified herself. The poet spelled, she threw herself with energy into book-binding, and is a skillful craftsman.

A certain farmer who was very absent-minded, had recently arranged to go into Perth with a load of hay. He led his horse out of the stable, but, run the story instead of locking it into the shafts of the cart, he absent-mindedly led the animal along the road, and never so much as looked behind him till he walked into the yard where the hay was to be delivered. "Where shall I back into?" he asked the stableman standing by. "Back in what?" asked the man. "The hay, you stupid!" "What hay? I've no hay, ye daffie!" Turning round to his consternation, the farmer discovered that he had left the wagon at home, and brought the horse alone. In his hurry to repair the error he started off home at a quick walk, and was half way back to his own farm before he realized the fact that he had forgotten to bring the horse with him.
