The Nut-Cracker of the Allies.

What has been called the battle of the Aisne which began almost seven weeks ago is still progressing, with the lines along the Aisne and through Argonne, around Verdun and south to Belfort, little changed. In this respect the battle almost looks like a stalemate. As we have pointed out previously, the newer feature of the situation is the development north of a line from Compiègne to the Belgian frontier. Further north again we learn that the allies have taken Tournai in Belgium, and one of the messages to-day forces the surmise that the Belgian forces have already joined with this long flanking line. This we pointed to a day or two ago as the probable objective of the allies. The Germans have apparently failed to break through the line at any point although they appeared a few days ago to have pushed back the line at Roye and Launoy. The allies, too, have succeeded as yet in utilizing the Aisne line and the flanking line with the fulcrum at Compiègne as a nut-cracker. The Germans have so far been able to keep the great levers apart and the allies have not yet obtained sufficient strength to close the nut-cracker. But the nut-cracker remains intact as the allies engine of war, and so long as the allies can keep it intact, time must count for them in weakening the Germans and strengthening the allies.

Our Boys Have Probably Arrived

Messrs. Bowring Bros., Ltd., received a message yesterday which stated that the S. S. Florizel had "probably" arrived at her destination. On the face of it, this would indicate that the senders had no positive knowledge of her arrival, but some are inclined to read the message otherwise, and to read into it a censored message, which originally meant that the Florizel had actually arrived. Whatever there may be in this theory, the fact remains that Mr. J. S. Munn rang us up this morning and told us that his message did not state positively that the Florizel had arrived but that she "probably" had arrived. At noon we rang up the Colonial Secretary to ask him for any information he might have. He said he had no word, but kindly offered to communicate with his Excellency the Governor. Mr. Bennett did so, but His Excellency said he had no word about her. In spite of this actual dearth of official information, the probabilities still remain that the Florizel has arrived and that our boys have disembarked. They left on Sunday night, the 4th, and it is now the 15th. This allows ten and a half days for the trip, and even if the slowest part of the convoy did not make more than 9 knots, there has now been ample time for their arrival. It will be remembered that the Indian troops had been in France almost a week before their arrival was announced by the British Bureau. The troops arrived at Bordeaux on October 1st, and the announcement was not made till October 7th. It may be that a similar course is being pursued in reference to the Canadian and Newfoundland contingents. What we may feel fully assured is that every precaution that human foresight could devise was taken by the Navy to ensure their safe arrival.

Archbishop Howley Passes to His Rest

Shortly before 2 p.m. this afternoon His Grace the Archbishop of St. John's, the Rt. Rev. Michael Francis Howley, D.D., passed to his rest. His Grace, although not in the best of health for some time past, took seriously ill about a fortnight ago. In the year of the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal, he was in the Royal Victoria Hospital at Montreal. For the past fortnight he has been gradually sinking, and fears that he might pass away have been entertained since Sunday night when he became unconscious. He however, recovered consciousness and at times seemed to recover a little, but there were no real hope of his ultimate recovery. The change for the worse came at 10.30 this morning but he lingered on until nearly 2 p.m. He died surrounded by the priests of his diocese and the nearby outposts of his diocese. His relatives. Thus died the first Archbishop in Newfoundland, the first native Bishop of his church here, and a citizen with the keenest interest in his native land. No more ardent lover of Newfoundland ever lived than Archbishop Howley.

A Correction.

We regret that on the 7th inst., we did a grave injustice to an estimable foreigner doing business amongst us. Our report refers to Mr. Lago as a German who had been naturalized in America since the war. In this and other particulars the writer was absolutely in error. Mr. J. Lago is not a German, nor a naturalized American citizen, but he is a Spaniard, who has been doing business for some time here in the salt trade. Mr. J. Lago is the Manager in St. John's of the North American Branch of Palma de Mallorca (Spain). The salt works are situated at Torrevieja. We communicated with Mr. Morey, the Spanish Consul, who vouches for the credentials of Mr. Lago. We regret much the annoyance this report has caused Mr. Lago.

Twelve apples of the same variety weighed a stone all but 6 oz.

Kaiser Urged "No Quarter."

SAYS U. S. ENVOY.

"I have in my possession a speech by the Kaiser read to the army in 1910 in which he stated that in the event of such a war as is now being fought in Europe, no quarter should be given to the enemy."

Captain Le Vert Coleman, United States Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort Monroe, made this statement yesterday when he arrived on the Lusitania. He is the first military observer to return from Europe. He did not show the speech of the Kaiser, however, nor tell where it was made.

"I am informed through interviews with wounded, and I believe, he went on, 'that this same speech by the Kaiser was read to the German army just before the outbreak of this war.'

"It is wrong for us to blame the generals in the field for the burning of Louvain, the bombardment of Rheims, the creation of a reign of terror.
"It is the policy of the German campaign to terrorize the people of the cities of the enemy, to frighten them so they will flee and quickly surrender. It is calculated, it is studied strategy.

Somewhere on your body? If so, attend to it at once. In Eczema—and Itchy spots, whether dry and scurfy, or moist and itching, and "weep," are generally excruciating—delays are foolish, allowing the disease to spread and affect more of the good skin.
