Plays Romantic Son, herner Who Hit
Gold Trail of '49.

Dustin Farnum came to the Majestic Theatre last night in what is probably his most virile, interesting photoplay in recent years. It is called "Kentucky Days" and was written by John Luntz.

As John Buckner, a young South-erner who, through circumstances is obliged to join the California gold rush of '49, leaving his beautiful young bride at the mercy of an unscrupulous cousin Farnum passes through a series of highly dramatic events which turn the audience on the edge of their seats.

Others in the cast besides Farnum and Miss Fielding are Bruce Gordon, who plays the cousin and William P.
DeVaul. David Solomon directed.

Jacobson and Evans received a big ovation. Their musical program was as follows:—"The Perfect Day," "What your going to do when their ain't no Jaz," "Prescription for the Blues," "Honest and Truly."

To-morrow afternoon a big special matinee for the children. Look out for "Women Who Give" next week.

It said to have been discussed at a conference in London last week, the market capitalization of the firms concerned being estimated at about £35,000,000.
