James Vick, business agent of the Bricklayers' Union, Toronto, denies the report that bricklayers are now putting up 1000 brick per day in place of 650 as has been the custom for the past year or so. Presumably union bricklayers are very much alike throughout Canada. Such being the case they are not earning their union wage of $1 per hour, and, of course, will not reap the benefit of full employment for the people are not all fools. Back in 1909 bricklayers at any ordinary straightaway work were accusttomed to lay from 1100 to 1200 brick in the eight hour day and received 55 cents per hour. wage was around 65 hour and production had been cut to "That the Cranbrook Poultry Association wish to express their sense of the serious need for the services of a poultry expert powers the services of th
