POLICE MAKE A RAID

On a York Street Residence and Arrested Four of the Inmates-Harriet Williams Also Has a "Social Time," Which Lands Her in the Cells.

For some little time the police have taken a particular interest in the occupants of a house on York street, No. 31. Three women lived there, whose names, Elsie McNeil, Mary Munford, and Elora Jacoby, will not be found in the city directory. They were happy in each other's company, more especially so on Saturday night, when there was an unusual abundance of liquid refreshment. It was at the moment when carnival was being held most boisterously that a few of Chief Williams' subordinates, unable to further restrain their curiosity, intruded upon the scene of jollification. This was at 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Mr. Frederick Hart had superseded them, and the men in blue escorted the quartet to the police station, where they will await the police magistrate's pleasure until tomorrow morning.

There is another house on Bathurst one.

Lord Roberts, in the course of an to the one that was emptied on Sunday morning. One of the women in the latter house is said to be the mother of Elora Jacoby, who at present lan-guishes in jail. A daughter of one of the women, Mary, resides there also, and it is said that she does so against her will, and that she is forced to continue in a life that she loathes. some time Inspector Sanders has been interested in Mary, and is trying to secure for her more congenial quarters. Not content with the capture of Mrs. McNeil and her coadjutors, the police interrupted what Mrs. Harriet Williams, who participated in it, called a "rittle social time." It was undoubtedly a little social time as long as Harriet could remember. Unfortunately for herself and the peace of the neighbors. when she got past remembering, the social time became an uprogrious time. The whole trouble was caused by a visit of Mr. George Thompson to Mrs. Williams' Van street residence. They will explain matters as best they may to Police Magistrate Love tomorrow

A Highway Across The Continent.

Goods called for and delivered to any

All of the "good roads" movements hitherto started in the United States are insignificant in comparison with the scheme which the "Automobile Club of America" has formed for a national highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific. A commission, of which Major-Gen. Nelson A. Miles is chairman, has re-ported upon the most feasible route. It proposes that the line shall start at Boston, and run by way of Albany, Syracuse and Buffalo to Chicago; thence through Des Moines aud Omaha to Denver; across the Rocky Mountains to Salt Lake; thence southwestwardly to Sacramento and San Francisco.

The plan contemplates an extension of the road from Boston eastward to Portland, Maine; and from the western terminus, an extension southward to Los Angeles, and northward to Port-land, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington. It is proposed also that a highway shall be built, running northward from St. Augustine, through Savannah, Charleston, Richmond, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York to Albany, thus making a north and south line, intersecting that running east and west.

This is a tremendous scheme, but it would be hasty to say that it was impracticable. If the people of the twenty-five states and territories through which the proposed highway would run really want such a road, they can have it; and perhaps they can be made to want it, when the advantages are fully understood. The first thing necessary is that Congress shall authorize the preliminary surveys; and it is proposed that the cost of con-struction shall be borne in equal parts cities through which the road may pass. The almost universal use of the bicycle has given a strong impulse to the building of good roads. As the automobile comes into wider use, a new influence will be added to that of the wheelmen; and with concentration and co-operation in road-improvement, results may be secured which would have been thought impossible 25 years
