Manual Training and Domestic Science.

The inspector of public schools and the principal of the Collegiate Institute have been visiting schools in Washington, New York, Boston and other cities across the line, and have submitted instructive reports to the local Board of Education. Inspector Edwards was so favorably impressed by the manual training and domestic science courses that he recommends their introduction in the higher grades of the public schools. These subjects have come to stay, and have been adopted by the more progressive school boards in the Province. The opposition to them is founded on a misconception of their nature and purpose. Many confound manual training with technical education, or a sort of apprenticeship in some handicraft or mechanical occupation. Principal Radcliffe reports that in no manual training high school which he visited was the object to teach the student a trade. While the eye and hand are trained, it is chiefly a mental exercise, stimulating the inventive faculties and the qualities of resourcefulness and self-reliance. It is the function of the school to equip the student to make the best use of his powers in whatever work he may choose, but it is no part of primary and secondary education to train him for a particular occupation. Some of the schools in this Province have gone too far in this direction, in the effort to give education a more "practical" bent. The teaching of shorthand is defensible, because it is an excellent mental discipline, but there is no purely educational value in typewriting. If the object of domestic science was to teach girls to earn their livelihood as milliners, dressmakers, or cooks, it should have no place in the schools; but this is not the intention. As Principal Radcliffe says in his report, the purpose of the course is "not to qualify them for positions to draw salaries, but to prepare them for a cultured, thrifty, intelligent governing of a household." The happiness and health of society would be promoted beyond measure if all girls received efficient instruction in household duties, and qualified themselves to create well-ordered homes. It is impossible to estimate the amount of misery, the number of domestic tragedies, that grow directly out of ignorance of household economics.

Immigration Problem.

Mrs. Close's scheme of child emigration to Canada, propounded at a meeting at the Mansion House, London, was described in these columns the other day. Briefly, the scheme contemplates the acquisition of a number of 200-acre farms in different parts of Canada, where English poor law children shall be reared under the care of managers, the expense to be borne by the English poor law funds. The poor law guardians of England, who exercise parental rights over 4,000 children, met the other day and strongly disapproved the scheme. Dr. Barnardo also opposes it, claiming that the work can be done better by existing agencies, including his own.

Mrs. Close's scheme will not find enthusiastic support in Canada. Experience has shown that the colony plan of immigration, by which natives of one country, or members of one sect, are settled in compact groups, is not the best for themselves or the community. When immigrants of the same nationality are massed together, they are not so readily influenced by the customs and institutions of their adopted country. Dr. Barnardo has the right idea, his wards being distributed throughout the country, wherever homes are found for them. His scheme is also superior to Mrs. Close's in that Barnardo boys and girls serve a probationary term in the Barnardo homes before they are sent to the Dominion, and the physically and mentally defective children are weeded out.

The immigration problem would be greatly simplified if this sifting process could be applied to all immigrants entering this country. The rush of population is such that the authorities should impose wholesome tests and restrictions in the interests of good citizenship. Happily the main streams of immigration are coming from Great Britain and the United States, so that we may be comparatively indifferent about seeking an increase of population from other countries. There is said to be a movement on foot for the emigration to Canada of 200,000 Scandinavians, a Russian sect, but under no circumstances should they be encouraged to settle here in a colony. The Doukhobors were brought out at a time when the country needed population more than it does today, and while the experiment has been justified by the splendid success of the colony, in spite of the vagaries of a few fanatics, it is not one that should be risked again on a large scale. The national powers of assimilation should not be taxed by indigestible lumps, such as the Mormon settlement, for example, appears to be. Let foreign immigrants be scattered as much as possible, so that they will learn Canadian ways from their neighbors.

The British Unemployed.

Rider Haggard, the novelist, is not wholly a romancer, as for years he has taken a practical interest in practice, and wrote an entertaining account of his experiment, taking a very pessimistic view of the present conditions of British husbandry. He arrived in New York the other day with a commission from the British Government to inquire into the operation of the Salvation Army's industrial and agricultural colonies with the view of finding a remedy for the problem of the unemployed in the mother country, by establishing labor colonies in South Africa. The expenses of the visit are paid by the Cecil Rhodes estate, as the colonization of South Africa by the worthy poor of the United Kingdom who find themselves condemned to idleness and misery through no fault of their own was one of the empire builder's pet schemes.

Mr. Haggard declared to an interviewer that the greatest evil of modern times from the standpoint of European nations at any rate, is the drift of the rural population, and of the young people especially, to the already overcrowded centers. The attraction, he thought, was in the pleasures, variety, excitement of city life, and the only way to check this unfortunate movement was to create real counter attractions in the rural districts. In England, the prospect of accumulating a little money and acquiring a title to land would keep many agricultural laborers in the country or induce unemployed workmen to emigrate to the colonies, where there are great tracts of uncultivated and fertile land.

The Salvation Army has established three agricultural colonies in the United States—one at Herrick, Ohio; one at Fort Amity, Cal., and one at Fort Rommie, Col. Only the "converted" are assisted by the army, but the plan can be applied to the unemployed generally. Each of the army colonies is provided with a home, 20 acres and the necessary tools. He is required to pay certain annual installments, and in eighteen years if not sooner, he will discharge his whole debt and become an independent farmer. Canada will not begrudge South Africa any increase of population which she may derive from the establishment of like plantations for the benefit of England's unemployed. The most desirable class of British emigrants will continue to come to Canada, because Canada is a better country than South Africa every day in the year.

It is time somebody remarked again that Russia must be feeling shaky.

The B. N. A. Act is one of those compositions which are more talked about than read.

Le Journal, the only French-Canadian Conservative daily in Montreal, has suspended publication. It says the Conservative party is suffering from weakness above, and indifference below. Le Journal ought to know.

The Colonial Secretary says the Imperial trade conference is being called to find out what the colonies want. Some Canadian manufacturers want higher duties on British goods, but the fact is not calculated to help Mr. Chamberlain.

It is estimated that 100,000 Russians and Japs have been killed or wounded during the fighting of the last ten days. Under modern conditions of warfare the wounded can seldom be removed or treated until nightfall. The horrors in Manchuria must be beyond conception.

Lady Minto is making no mistake when she advises traveling Britons to spend their vacation in this country. Canada has the finest summer resorts in the world. There is room in the Ontario Highlands for the whole population of the British Isles.

From all appearances Premier Parent received much the same treatment as Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Parent seems to have made some tactical errors, but the general impression is that he has striven to give Quebec honest and economical government and that his integrity is unimpeachable. He comes out of the crisis much better than his bolting ministers.

The Postmaster-General is wise in moving slowly in the matter of rural mail delivery. It is all very well to say the experiment might be tried in one county or district, but it would be unfair to discredit it in Canada would clamor for the same privilege. The cost of a general rural delivery in a country of sparse population and magnificent distances like Canada would be ruinous.

Writing to a St. Thomas Liberal, Sir Wilfrid gives some information about the separate schools as they exist in the Northwest. He says:

"The impression prevails that separate schools such as they are intended by the bill will be ecclesiastical schools. This is quite an error. What you call separate schools in this instance is practically national schools. Here the law of the Northwest Territories at the present moment: All the teachers have to pass an examination and be certified by the board of public instruction; all tuition has to be given in the English language; at 3:30 children can be given religious instruction according to rules made by the trustees of the schools, but attendance at this is not even compulsory."

This Great Country.

[St. Thomas Journal.]
It is noteworthy that Walter Scott, M. P., who is looked upon as a Sifton's likely successor in the cabinet, is a native of the same township as Mr. Sifton, London Township, Middlesex County. Mr. Scott is a newspaper man, a typical westerner, well-liked and looked upon as able and resourceful.

Japanese Idea of Beauty.

It might interest them, the lecturer said, to know the Japanese idea of feminine beauty. It varied a little between Tokyo and Kyoto, but on the whole, the Japanese considered that a woman should not exceed five feet in height; should have a comparatively fair skin developed by a beautiful oval face, with thin and jet-black hair, an oval face, with a narrow, straight nose, rather large eyes, nearly black, thick eyelashes, small mouth hiding behind full lips, even rows of small, white teeth, ears not altogether small, thick eyebrows and a medium forehead, from which the hair should grow in circular or Fujiyama shape—that was, a shape recalling the truncated cone of the famous volcano.

What It Is to Live.

[Boston Transcript.]
To grapple fate and fearlessly
Defy its stubborn, stern decree
Until, disarmed, the terror lies
Beneath our feet, recedes and dies;

To look beyond, content to wait,
And dignity our low estate,
By bending lower, e'er to seek
To help the fallen, lift the weak;

To take no backward step to wit,
Be sure that what we do is right,
To love the best, the best to give,
—This is the meaning solved, to live.

Thinking in Millions.

[London Graphic.]
Unconsciously, most English men and women have been thinking in millions ever since the American and mining millionaires have come to the front—and that is one of the main causes of the distress which exists throughout the country. In the West End most means of moderate means have been living as if a vast fortune was awaiting them in the immediate future, their wives and daughters have dressed accordingly, and in the city the average businessman will not consider a proposal that at first has no prospect of profit on a large scale.

On several occasions the little girl was refused dessert on the ground that "it was not good for her."
Recently, when there were not a few guests at dinner at her house in question, the youngster, having obtained permission to speak, naively asked: "Mother, will the dessert hurt me, or is there enough to go round?"

TOPICS OF TALK IN THAMESFORD

Enjoyable Farewell Reception—Young Men's Club May Be Organized.

Thamesford, March 8.—Mr. Thomas Abbot, who for several years has been engaged with Mr. M. Cowper as blacksmith, has secured a good position in Thamesford, and with his family will move there about the 1st of April. Mr. Abbot will be much missed from the borough, especially in lodge and sport circles. His many friends here will regret to lose him. Mr. Abbot's little child, who for some time has been very ill, will likely soon be as well as ever again.

Special evangelistic services will be held in the Methodist Church each Sunday evening until further notice. Mr. Armstrong, who was operated on in London hospital a few days ago, has returned home. He is getting along well.

Mr. Walker Freel was in Toronto on Monday attending the funeral of his brother-in-law Mr. Ogden. There is some talk of organizing a young men's club. We believe it would be a move in the right direction.

Mr. John G. McKay held a very successful sale of farm stock and implements yesterday. Mr. McKay is leaving the farm on the Governor's road and will be succeeded by Mr. McKay, who will work the old homestead on the 12th line.

Mrs. B. B. McCarty and Mrs. Hugh Kennedy are visiting friends in Toronto this week.

Dr. Ball, of Victoria Hospital, London, paid a visit to the village on Wednesday.

Mr. Hugh Kennedy has sold one of his fancy Portland cutters to Mr. Alex McDonald.

Mrs. B. A. Dundas will sell her farm stock and implements by public auction on Thursday, March 9. She will shortly move to the house in Durham street which she recently purchased from Mr. James Fillmore.

The Traders' Bank moved into their new building yesterday, and the Star moved into the building vacated by the bank.

Mr. Alex B. Young has purchased the west half of lot 4, con. 10, East Nissouri, from Mr. John Knox, of North Oxford.

An afternoon social and tea under the auspices of the W. F. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church will be held on Thursday, March 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Young.

During the afternoon the ladies will be engaged in the making of quilts, which together with a few of 10 cents for tea will be sent to the assistance of the needy in India. It is hoped that a large number will turn out to assist in the good work. Mr. and Mrs. Wallace show their deep interest by throwing open their home to all who may have a desire to come. Gentlemen are invited to tea. All are welcome.

An enjoyable affair took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Gunn, North Oxford, Thursday night, March 8. A farewell reception tendered them by their many friends and neighbors, on the occasion of their leaving the village where they have resided for so many years. As a strong recognition of the esteem in which they are held, Mr. Gunn was presented with a beautiful fur coat, including muff and collar, accompanied with a kindly-worded address. Mr. Gunn's chairman, and the addresses given by those present indicated the popularity of Mr. and Mrs. Gunn.

The latter part of the evening was spent in dancing and games.

Miss Hunter, of Drumbo, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. Robinson, for a few days recently.

The young bachelors' hop on Friday night was in every respect a success.

Miss Kennedy, nation of Chatham, is visiting her uncle, Mr. Hugh Kennedy, this week.

Mrs. (Dr.) Sutherland, of Norwich, is the mother of her daughter, Miss Sutherland, teacher, at the manse on Friday.

Mr. O. M. Alger, Embro, made a business call here on Saturday.

Mrs. Storey and two sons, Hilderton, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Storey.

Messrs. John Clark and son have purchased the J. P. Vining farm on the Governor's road for $7,200. This is considered a good figure.

The I. O. O. F. degree team of Samaritan Lodge, Ingersoll, will exemplify the work of the second degree at the annual convention of the lodge on Wednesday evening.

The team will be accompanied by the D. D. G. M. of Ingersoll, and a number of the other brethren. The local lodge is making preparations for an enjoyable time.

Master Roy Wilkie is laid up with an attack of rheumatism, and is unable to attend school. We hope he will soon recover.
