It was finally decided, after quite a long delay, to give the programme, without the Toronto men, but the "gods" received the announcement by Chairman O'Donnell with exceedingly bad grace. The "gods" and even some people downstairs displayed their indignation all through the evening, hissing and hooting the old country people when they appeared on the stage.

After the musicians had gone

Mayor Sweet announced that the comedians would give theirs. They did, and were given a great reception. The English musicians, in excuse for their action declared that they had never before performed alongside of comedians and they never intended to. Their action has created a great deal of indignation here.
