"Plantagenet,

FLOUR!

FLOUR!

She was a tall, slight woman, scarcely more than a girl in years, with shining brown-hair, large dark eyes, and cheeke that had been as pink as sea-shells in the flays of her happy maiden-life. They were white and wasted now—a circumstance that might perhaps be easily accounted for by the little babe on her lap and the two-year-old elf who was tottering about the room in aimless pursuit of kittens, sunbeams and other baby delights.

"Things are all at sixes and sevens," went on Mr. Smith, tying his cravat before the mirror, and viciously twitching it into a knot. "Coal wasted, butter thrown into the soap grease jar, dish-piteously pleaded Mrs. Smith. "I feel almost worn out, and I think the change would do me good."

"And what is to become of me?" sonorously demanded the husband.

Mrs. John Smith thought of the day's masonic excursion last week, the trout fishing expedition into the Catskills a fortnight since, the races at Jerome park, and the drives to High Bridge with Parker, Betts and Frisbee, in an open barouche, all within the month. But she said nothing except:

barouche, all within the month. But she said nothing except:

"if don't cost much to go, John. And I'll only stay away a week. Do let me go! The doctor says the fresh air might help baby along with his feeth, and little Johnnie is drooping this hot weather."

"Well," said Mr. Smith, as ungraciously as possible, "I suppose you'll have to go. Five dollars at least it will cost me, and altogether our expenses are ruinous this year. See how Georgiana Trotter manages for her husband. I don't suppose it costs them half to live that it does us. might have married Georgiana Trotter once. I almost wish I had."

It was on Mrs. Smith's lips to utter:

without her dinner contentedly, eating a crust of bread in the stead, but her heart yearned hungsily for the omitted caress, the ignered word of tenderness. Poor Mrs. John Smith! How the strong-minded of her sex would have pitied and her sex would have pitied and minded of her sex would have pixed and despised her.

No light! no fire! It was dreary enough, on that chill August evening, as Mr. Smith screwed his night-key into the latch and groped his way in the hall. He sat down in the bay-window and stared about the vacant room. There was his wife's workbasket on the table, her little rocking chair standing vacant beside it, while Johnny's forgotten rattle lay on the foor close by.

close by.

"It's deuced lonely!" muttered Mr.
Smith, with semething of a shiver. "I hope Jenny won't stay long."

And as he lighted his cigar and whiffed away, a guilty sense of his own short-comings came upon him.

"It must have been rather a stupid life for here, poor little thing!" thought

"It must have been rather a stupid life for her here, poor little thing!" thought he. "I might have come home early to keep her company a great many times, when I didn't. She had to sew a great deal for the children. I wish I had bought her a sewing machine when she saked for one Allison used to bring upfruit and flowers for his wife every evening. I wonder I never thought of it for Jenny. And, now I come to reflect upon the matter, Jenny has grown thin and pale of late."

He moved his chair uneasily, and and pale of late."

He moved his chair uneasily, and emitted a thread of blue, spicy smoke from his lips very much as if he were not enjoying it particularly.

"I suppose they are at Biberry farm by this time," said he to himself. "I suppose the younkers are in bed and Jenny is sitting out on the piazza, listening to the whippo-wills. I've almost a mind to go out there to morrow evening, and take some peaches and bansansas and things. It would be a pleasant surprise for Jenny, and—hallo! what's that! A ring at the bell?"

Flinging his cigar into the unused grate,

bell?'
Flinging his cigar into the unused grate,
John Smith shuffled along to the door in his slippers.

"O—a telegram! Now, I wonder who should telegraph to me!"

"Well," said the shivering and raindrenched messenger, "p'raps you'd better open it and see. Anyway, I've no call to have ground here no longer!" hang round here no longer!"

And off he went, while Mr. Smith carried his buff envelope back to the parlor light and somewhat nervously tore

To John Smith: Reliroad accident. Your wife is killed and your child dangerously hurt. Come by flext train.

JAKED MEREDITH, M. D.

Again and again Mr. Smith's bewildered Again and again Mr. Smith's bewildered eyes roved over the contents of this appalling missive before he could fully comprehend its deadly meaning.

"Dead! killed!" he muttered to himself. "My Jenny killed by a railroad accident?"

And then, catching a railway guide from the book-shelf, he whirled over its leaves with a trembling hand. The next train did not leave the terminus under an hour and a half. An hour and a half! To him the same seemed almost like eternity. How could he endure this awful agony of soul for an hour and a halo?

"Perhaps they are incorrect," he mut-

Boul for an hour and a halo?

"Perhaps they are incorrect," he muttered to himself, wiping the beeads of cold aweat from his brow. "People can't always judge exactly in such a moment of dismay. Perhaps she is only badly hurt, and I can nurse her through it after all. My Jenny! my loving, patient, sweeteyed wife!" A strong sob rose up in his throat as if it would strangle him. "No, no, she is killeds" he gasped, as his eye 'ell once more on the telegram. "Dead! and I never can speak to her again or tell over The World at breakfast or on the way down town in the cars.

BY HARRY COOPER.

SM HARRY COOPER.

Mow this was not by any means an assertion sui generis. In fact, according to his own statement, John Smith was "astonished" at his wife at least once a day on an average. Mrs, Smith was used to it.

Me What a cruel, exacting brute I have been! God knews I didn't mean it, and new it is too late to make any amends. Why didn't the children go too! How can I bring them up without Jenny!"

His head drooped low in his quivering hands; a low, spasmodic groan burst from his pale lips. An hour and a half before he could go to Jenny; half an hour, then, before he could look upon her dead face; for Cowdrey was an insignificant way-station some eight or nine miles up the road.

before the mirror, and viciously twitching it into a knot. "Coal wasted, butter thrown into the soap grease jar, dishtowels taken for stove-cloths and my third best pants sold to a dealer in tin-ware for a funnel and two pie-platters. A funnel, Mrs. Smith, and two pie-platters? I never heard of anything so outrageous in my life."

"But, my dear," meekly interposed the much- enduring wife, "we needed the tin ware, and you had not worn the garments for a year. They were full of moths."

"There it is again," said Mr. Smithtoware, and you had taken proper precautions. I never heard of a moth in my mother's time. And now you are actually asking permission to visit your brother up the Hudson."

"I have not been away from home before since we were married, John," it seems by placed Mrs. Smith. "I feel allowed the into a knot. "Coal wasted, butter accident!" said Jenny, her voice faltering, acident!" said Jenny, her voice to live my life over again !"

And from that hour John Smith was a

And from that hour John Smith was a changed man. To Jenny it seemed almost like millenium; but Mrs. Georgiana Trotter turned up her nose and said:

"John Smith must be in his dotage, spending all his time and money in carriages to the park, extra help and fine clothes for that pale-faced wife of his. John Smith always was a fool!"

Notwithstanding the great number who yearly succumb to this terrible and fatal disease, which is daily winding its fatal doils around thousands who are unconscious of its deadly presence, Dr. Plerce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will cleanse and purify the blood of scrofulous impurities, and cure tubercular consumption (which is only scrofulous disease of the lungs). Send 10 cents in stamps and get Dr. Pierce's complete treatise on consumption and kindred affections, with numerous testimonials of cures. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y.

—During the summer and fall people are liable to sudden attacks of bowel complaints, and with no prompt remedy or medical aid at fand, life may be in danger. Those whose experience has given them wisdom, always keep Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry at hand for prompt relief, and a physician is seldom required.

Orion Catlin, 49 Pearl street, Buffalo, N.Y., says: "I tried various remedies for the piles, but found no relief until I used Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil, which entirely cured me after a few applications." Since Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has become celebrated, unprincipled persons are imitating it. Get the genuine.

Mr. R. C. Winlow, Toronto, writes, "Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery is a valuable medicine to all who are troubled with indigestion. I tried a bottle of it after suffering for some ten years, and the results are certainly beyond my expectations, It assists digestion wonderfully. I digest my food with no apparent effort, and am now entirely free from that sensation, which sensation, which svery dyspeptic well knows, of unpleasant fulness after each meal."

-Mrs. George Simpson, Toronto, says:

"I have suffered severely with corns, and was unable to get relief from treatment of any kind until I was recommended to try Hollowsy's Corn Cure. After applying it for a few days I was enabled to remove the corn, root and branch—no pain whatever, and no inconvenience in using it. I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from corns."
