

ESTABLISHED 1878.
The Weekly Monitor
is published
Every Wednesday at Bridgetown.

Weekly Monitor
Advertising Rates.
One Inch—First insertion, 50 cents; every after insertion, 25 cents; one month, $1.00; two months, $1.50; three months, $2.00; six months, $3.00.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use the hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brassy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Culverwell Medical Co.,
41 Ann St., New York,
Post Office Box 4566.
THE LOCAL MEAT MARKET.
Registered Under the Companies Act
1862 to 1875.
English, American, Canadian and Australian
MEATS
Provision Depots.
CAPITAL - - - $100,000.

HELLO!
AGENTS can make more money selling our new TELEPHONES!
than in any other business. Send $4 for sample and full particulars, and we will send you a complete set of instructions, and a list of names of all the telephone companies in the United States.
U. S. TELEPHONE CO.,
123 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Subscribe for
The Monitor
KEEP YOUR MONEY AT HOME, BY PATRONIZING A LOCAL INDUSTRY, AND STOP TAKING DOLLAR WEEKLIES THAT CONTAIN ONLY GENERAL MATTER, WHILE THE MONITOR LABORS FOR YOUR BENEFIT IN EVERY WAY.
ONLY $1.50 PER YEAR.

Ready - Made CLOTHING!
BUFFALO ROBES, &c.

JUST RECEIVED from Montreal, a large and well assorted stock of Ready Made Clothing & Buffalo Robes, consisting of
Men's Overcoats, Youths' Ulsters, Men's Ulsters, Coats, Reefers, All
Splendid Assortment
FALL SUITS
Pants and Vests. Also,
1 Doz. Very Fine Buffalo Robes.
All the above will be sold very LOW FOR CASH.
BEALES & DODGE,
Middleton, Nov. 78

MONCTON Refined Sugars.
ALL orders for the above received on or
LAST DAY OF MAY,
will be filled and delivered the
FIRST WEEK IN JUNE,
—BY—
W. B. TROOP.
Granville, May 22nd, 1881.

NOTICE: The Canada Advertising Agency, No. 29 King St., West Toronto, W. B. Troop, Manager, is authorized to receive advertisements for this paper.

THE ANNAPOLIS ORGAN COMPANY,
MANUFACTURERS OF
Parlor and Church Organs.
For Power and Quality of Tone, Rapidity of Action, and Promptness to Respond, they are Unsurpassed.
A careful examination of the instruments will convince the public that both interior and exterior are honestly made.
In beauty and elegance of case they far exceed any Organ manufactured in the Maritime Provinces. They are AS LOW IN PRICE as is consistent with first-class workmanship, and are FULLY WARRANTED.
Parties Desiring a
FIRST-CLASS INSTRUMENT.
Will find it their advantage to Correspond with
THE ANNAPOLIS ORGAN COMPANY,
Or visit their Warerooms, George St., Annapolis.

Great Cause of Human Misery
In the Loss of MANHOOD
We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the Cause of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Insanity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from the loss of Manhood.
Price, in a sealed envelope, only 8 cents, or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be rationally cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines, or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
The cure should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
Address,
The Culverwell Medical Co.,
41 Ann St., New York,
Post Office Box 4566.

THREE TRIPS A WEEK.
Steamer "EMPRESS."
Between St. John, Digby and Annapolis.
Connecting Digby with the Western Railway and with Weymouth, YARMOUTH, and at Annapolis with the Annapolis and Annapolis Railway, for and from KENTVILLE, WINDSOR, HALIFAX, and the International Steamship Co., and the Provincial and New England All Rail Lines for Portland, Boston, and other points in the United States and Upper Canada.
SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.
COMMENCING MONDAY, June 6th, and until further notice, the splendid, fast and staunch Steamer EMPRESS, will leave for Weymouth, St. John, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, at EIGHT O'CLOCK. Returning will leave Annapolis for Digby and St. John, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons, after arrival of Express Train from Halifax.
Fare—Annapolis to Digby, 75c.
Fare Digby to St. John, $2.00.
The splendid Steamer EMPRESS, connecting with the International Steamship Co. leave St. John on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, for Portland and Boston, thus forming connection with "Empress" each way every trip. Express Trains connect with the New England All Rail Line leave St. John at 8.15 a. m. and 9 p. m. every day, excepting Saturday night and Sunday morning, to Boston and Portland, issued at special reduced rates. Baggage Checked Through. Low Rates Fright.
Further information to be obtained of P. H. DEAN, Esq., General Manager, W. & A. Railway, and the Station Agent at that Company; also from S. BIRNELL, Esq., General Superintendent of the Provincial and New England All Rail Lines, to Boston and Portland, issued at special reduced rates. Baggage Checked Through. Low Rates Fright.

THE LOCAL MEAT MARKET.
Registered Under the Companies Act
1862 to 1875.
English, American, Canadian and Australian
MEATS
Provision Depots.
CAPITAL - - - $100,000.
OFFICES—Central Depot and Market: 84 Upper Thames Street, E. C. (Under Cannon Street Station) London, E. C.
ENGLISH AND CANADIAN COLD STORAGE WHARF, Cousin Lane, E. C.
BANKERS—The London and County Bank, 21 London Street, E. C. D. TALLERMAN, Esq., Genl. Manager.
THE Subscriber begs to call the attention of Shippers of Cattle, Poultry, &c., to London, to the value of the STEAMSHIP SERVICE, 81 Upper Thames Street, London. Furnished with Refrigerating Chambers of large capacity, which produce all kinds of meat preserved for any length of time, at any season of the year. The advantages of this service are evident, inasmuch as by slaughtering immediately on arrival, the meat is fresh, and the most advantageous arrangement may be secured for the disposal of the engagement.
To parties desirous of shipping apples, &c., to London, the value of the STEAMSHIP SERVICE, 81 Upper Thames Street, London. The service is so arranged that the fruit is packed in special compartments, and is kept in the best condition, and is delivered in perfect order, and in the most advantageous manner, at any season of the year. The advantages of this service are evident, inasmuch as by slaughtering immediately on arrival, the meat is fresh, and the most advantageous arrangement may be secured for the disposal of the engagement.
Information in detail can be obtained by application to the undersigned, who are authorized to make advances to Shippers, and, if desirable, to take interest for the company in the profit and loss of operations.
Wm. HARR, Agent,
171 Hollis Street, Halifax, N. S.
Thos. S. WYMAN, Agent,
Annapolis, N. S. 431f

Books, - - Stationery.
Buckley & Allen,
OFFER during the Autumn Season, at low prices a large stock of FINE STATIONERY, and School supplies. Fancy Stationery, and Stationers' Sundries. Novelties in Stationery and Paper Envelopes. Special inducements to purchasers of Photographs, Autograph and Scrap Albums. An immense variety of Bibles, Church Services and Prayer Books. All the Standard, Franklin Square and Standard Libraries. Complete supply of Posters, large assortment of Miscellaneous and Standard Books. Call and inspect for yourselves. Don't forget the address.
BUCKLEY & ALLEN,
124 Granville St., Halifax.

GREAT BARGAIN!
THE Subscriber offers for SALE or RENT or private Contract,
His Beautiful Residence
LOWER MIDDLETON.
The House contains 11 rooms, all in thorough repair. Good Stabling for 2 or 4 Horses. Carriage House and Wood House. The grounds consist of 2 acres in a high state of cultivation with a very fine orchard of 100 or more superior trees (choice varieties of fruit) nearly all which are in bearing, some trees producing yearly 3 Barrels or more. The Garden is also well stocked with a good variety of Fruit trees. The situation is convenient to Railway Station, Post Office, and within 5 minutes walk of three places of worship. Location desirable, and very healthy.
An LSO, Small Farm, situated in the NORTH WILLIAMSTOWN, about two miles from Lawrenceville Railway Station. The House contains 8 Rooms, the ground that only being finished. Good Barn, and a number of useful and necessary outbuildings. The Farm consists of about 20 acres, of which are in hay and under cultivation. A good Orchard, in bearing, producing yearly 20 to 30 Barrels, and with crops increase to 100 or more Barrels. Cost about 14 tons Hay yearly, with a superior quality of manure. Excellent at once desired. Terms for both places easy.

LAWRENCE TOWN PUMP CO.
LAWRENCE TOWN, A. C.
HOP BITTERS.
CONTAINS
HOPS, BEER, MANDRAKE, DANDELION,
AND THE PUREST AND BEST MEDICAL QUALITIES OF ALL OTHER BITTERS.
THEY'RE CURE
All Disorders of the Urinary, Bowel, Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Stomach Organs. Nervous Debility, Headaches, and general Female Complaints.
SIROID IN GOLD.
Will be found in all the Dispensaries and Druggists, and is sold by all the Wholesale and Retail Dealers in the Province.
Ask your Druggist for Hop Bitters and try them before you buy. There are others. Beware of cheap imitations. Beware of cheap imitations. Beware of cheap imitations.
D. DENNISON, Sole Agent, Halifax, N. S.

BRIDGETOWN Drug Store!
THE Subscriber has removed the Bridgetown Dispensary to
QUEEN STREET,
where you may find Drugs, Medicines and Chemicals, Fancy and Toilet articles, Sponges, Brushes, and Perfumery, Stationery, &c. Choice Tobaccos, Cigars and Confectionery. Physicians' Prescriptions carefully compounded, and orders answered with care and dispatch. Terms Cash.
J. DENNISON.
n8 3n

Poetry.
Sunshine and Shadow.
(From the Temple Bar.)
Only a bank of weeds, of simple weeds,
Of a sort of wild thyme and yarrow, scattered
Of tangled grass and slender willow-blown need.
Of broken notched ferns and tall spiked
foxglove bloom,
And yet a world of beauty garners there,
Low-twitching birds, soft sounds and colors fair.
Only a narrow mound, a long, low mound,
Snow-covered, 'neath a wintry, leaden
sky,
Unit by moon or stars; and all around
Through late brown trees the night
winds moan and sigh.
And when the sun has buried there,
Passion and pain, bright hopes and dull despair,
O golden bank, where sunbeams glint and play,
Bloom out in fragrance with a hundred flowers!
O narrow mound, keep till the judgment day
The mournful secrets of these hearts of stone,
Then in God's light let joy and sorrow
fade,
For near his brightness both alike are shad.

Conclusion.
In death life! His few glad days are ended,
His sleep surpasses all our dreams of rest,
His memory, with all joys and sorrows
blended,
Survives, and shall not cease.
But had he lived to meet earth's cares and troubles,
To struggle earthly in the ranks and file,
Fighting for Fortune's baubles of Fame's prize,
What then had been his fate?
The bright brown hair, that now is brown
forever,
Had not withstood Time's frosty fingers'
touch;
His face had, in earnest, had endu-
rances,
The look you loved so much.

Select Literature.
There's no doubt about it that Robinson was a good fellow at heart, and meant well; but it's astonishing what an amount of trouble a man may bring upon himself by undertaking too much for his fellow-creatures. I don't suppose there was another man in our store that took the interest Robinson did, that his motives should be misconstrued and unappreciated. I remember when I bought that new silver of mine, I disliked, for some reason or other, to see Robinson. I had a ridiculous aversion to telling him just where I got it, and when, and how much it cost, and what I did with the other one. It was a kindly sympathy on Robinson's part, that Robinson did, that his motives should be misconstrued and unappreciated. I remember when I bought that new silver of mine, I disliked, for some reason or other, to see Robinson. I had a ridiculous aversion to telling him just where I got it, and when, and how much it cost, and what I did with the other one. It was a kindly sympathy on Robinson's part, that Robinson did, that his motives should be misconstrued and unappreciated.

Rubber Bucket
PUMPS
THE Subscriber has removed the Bridgetown Dispensary to
LAWRENCE TOWN, A. C.
HOP BITTERS.
CONTAINS
HOPS, BEER, MANDRAKE, DANDELION,
AND THE PUREST AND BEST MEDICAL QUALITIES OF ALL OTHER BITTERS.
THEY'RE CURE
All Disorders of the Urinary, Bowel, Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Stomach Organs. Nervous Debility, Headaches, and general Female Complaints.
SIROID IN GOLD.
Will be found in all the Dispensaries and Druggists, and is sold by all the Wholesale and Retail Dealers in the Province.
Ask your Druggist for Hop Bitters and try them before you buy. There are others. Beware of cheap imitations. Beware of cheap imitations. Beware of cheap imitations.
D. DENNISON, Sole Agent, Halifax, N. S.

BRIDGETOWN Drug Store!
THE Subscriber has removed the Bridgetown Dispensary to
QUEEN STREET,
where you may find Drugs, Medicines and Chemicals, Fancy and Toilet articles, Sponges, Brushes, and Perfumery, Stationery, &c. Choice Tobaccos, Cigars and Confectionery. Physicians' Prescriptions carefully compounded, and orders answered with care and dispatch. Terms Cash.
J. DENNISON.
n8 3n

BRIDGETOWN Drug Store!
THE Subscriber has removed the Bridgetown Dispensary to
QUEEN STREET,
where you may find Drugs, Medicines and Chemicals, Fancy and Toilet articles, Sponges, Brushes, and Perfumery, Stationery, &c. Choice Tobaccos, Cigars and Confectionery. Physicians' Prescriptions carefully compounded, and orders answered with care and dispatch. Terms Cash.
J. DENNISON.
n8 3n

BRIDGETOWN Drug Store!
THE Subscriber has removed the Bridgetown Dispensary to
QUEEN STREET,
where you may find Drugs, Medicines and Chemicals, Fancy and Toilet articles, Sponges, Brushes, and Perfumery, Stationery, &c. Choice Tobaccos, Cigars and Confectionery. Physicians' Prescriptions carefully compounded, and orders answered with care and dispatch. Terms Cash.
J. DENNISON.
n8 3n

see, Smith, marriage is a sacred obligation. 'Unfoundedly, Robinson.' 'And requires study, Smith. I wouldn't have been a successful lawyer if I hadn't inquired into all the little intricacies of our line of business.' 'You certainly can judge of a good article, Robinson.' 'Ah, Smith, the one I've secured now is beyond price. She's just the kind of goods a man wants to rest his eyes upon when he's tired of shams and shoddies. Annie brought up to dazzle and deceive her mother. She has taken great pains to calculate in her daughter's qualifications of mind and character that will make her a good wife and mother. Mrs. Page is an excellent woman, Smith.' 'And I suppose her daughter is like her?' 'Well, no, Smith. She can't converse and reason as her mother can, nor has she her mother's appreciative qualities. Annie's mind is less acute.' 'She's as simple and pliable as a little child. I'm a happy man, Smith.' 'I was delighted to hear him say so, and told him so, and at the wedding I expressed it as my opinion that his happiness would last. I was charmed with his wife. She seemed such a nice, jolly little creature, so unaffected and simple in her manner, and had a wonderful magnetism about her. She was as plump and round as a little partridge, with big, black melting eyes, and pretty little mouth, I can't say I was so much drawn to her mother. She was a fine-looking woman, with a deep voice, and something very firm about the contour of her jaw. Mrs. Page had more of what they call character, her face than her daughter's would ever be. But I haven't the admiration for her face with character that some men have. Robinson always said he liked that kind of thing, and he certainly had in his mother-in-law. Robinson spent the better part of an hour talking with her that night, while I was chatting with his wife. I came away convinced that marriage was a very pleasant thing, with a little like Annie's, and my mother-in-law's quarters looked exceedingly dingy and forlorn.

I don't know how it was, but I took an extraordinary interest in Robinson's marriage, and was sorry to see a cloud on the matrimonial horizon before six months were over. 'We've gone to housekeeping, you know,' said Robinson. 'I was afraid Annie would be agreed to her mother, but Mrs. Page brood with me. It was better to build a little nest of our own. She took the kindest interest in everything, and wanted to go horse-hunting with Annie and to help her pick out the furniture. But I had already secured a house, and bought the furniture of friends of mine in the business, who would favor me in prices. As to bed-linen, carpets and things of that sort, I got them here, in the store at cost. In heaven's name, Smith, is there any reason why a man shouldn't hire his own house and purchase his own furniture?' 'None whatever,' I replied, 'unless it be that his wife desired the same privilege.'

'But she didn't, Smith. Annie said she was glad to leave it to me. I took the dear little woman in my arms and kissed her, and felt my heart lightened of a very heavy load that somehow had rested there since my last interview with her mother. But Mrs. Page's manner is very unpleasant. She is a little snooty, and she accuses me of robbing Annie of any legitimate happiness, but she conveys some such impression to my mind, and it makes me feel like a malefactor. I'm so fond of my wife that the thought of depriving her of the smallest joy is misery to me. 'Well, these little trifles will all come right, Robinson. It isn't as if your mother-in-law lived with you.' 'She's only round the corner, Smith. I thought of that when I took the house, that it would be so comfortable for Annie to live near her old home, and have the attention and advice of her mother. As heaven is my judge, Smith, I have tried to take every burden from my wife, and I opened accounts with the neighboring grocer, butcher, baker, and hired an excellent servant. I have a generous margin for sundries, which I look into rigidly at the first of every month, and settle with the other accounts, when we begin again with a clear fresh record. A woman certainly ought to be happy when she is doing nothing to do but enjoy herself. I've even persuaded her to put all her little expenses down in my book, so that she knows where every penny of her money goes; and, as a preliminary, I take care of the household expenses myself. The servant comes to me every morning for orders before I go to business, so that Annie scarcely knows what she's going to have for dinner. Could a man do more than that, Smith?' 'Perhaps he might do less, Robinson. I'm a miserable bachelor myself, and know nothing about women; but the question is, if you're not getting on the generous side—if you're not taking too much upon yourself.'

'A man can't do too much, Smith, for the woman he adores.' 'Just then a customer came in, and I was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the world. He loved his wife. He even esteemed his mother-in-law. I never saw a man so hard on his mother-in-law as Robinson, and so utterly fair to recommend it to others, as poor Robinson. But he began to be brighter and appreciatively happier. The anniversary of his wedding was close at hand, and he was interested in a gift to his wife. 'I was puzzled what to get,' said Robinson. 'You see she's got almost every thing, Smith; her wedding presents enclosed as many little adornments as I could find. At last I hit upon a black silk dress—a woman can't have too many, and I can get a bargain down to the store just now. She said she'd rather have the money and let it outside; but I persuaded her that would be foolish. So she's coming in to choose the trimmings this afternoon, and if she comes while I'm out you'll take care of her, won't you?' 'With pleasure,' I said, and it so happened that she did come while Robinson was away, and seemed to bring all the sunshine with her. 'I told her that her husband had left her in my care, and begged her to use me in any way that suggested itself to her; that it would be my happiness to serve her. 'I suppose there was an honest error about this declaration that impressed Mrs. Robinson. It so happened that I was able to show her some little favors and attentions in return for the many that her husband had done for me. I had told her I was under obligations to Robinson. Of course I didn't explain that it was in his desire to help me select my hat and coat and boots; it wasn't necessary to enter into these little details, but she understood that a natural gratitude on my part led me to send her in return a few such little favors, or new bouquets, or new music, or opera tickets, once in a while. So she knew the declaration of mine that day at the store, that I would be happy to serve her, came straight from my heart. 'You are so good and kind,' she said. 'Then all at once an eager wish leaped into her eyes. 'I wish I could ask you to do me a favor, Mr. Smith—' 'To grant a favor,' she said. 'Do,' I replied. 'I won't abuse your generosity.' 'Oh! I wonder if I will be right?' she said, clasping her little gloved hands, and looking up in my face with a charming air of indecision. 'I wonder if I ought to do such a thing?' 'The fact that you desire to do it is a proof that it is unselfish,' I replied. 'I do desire it, over so much,' she said; 'and it is perfectly unselfish. I've set upon our marriage anniversary.'

'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson?' 'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson,' she replied, tapping her foot with her parasol, with an air of vexation. She was looking upon the floor now, and a little like Robinson, and my mother-in-law's quarters looked exceedingly dingy and forlorn. 'I don't know how it was, but I took an extraordinary interest in Robinson's marriage, and was sorry to see a cloud on the matrimonial horizon before six months were over. 'We've gone to housekeeping, you know,' said Robinson. 'I was afraid Annie would be agreed to her mother, but Mrs. Page brood with me. It was better to build a little nest of our own. She took the kindest interest in everything, and wanted to go horse-hunting with Annie and to help her pick out the furniture. But I had already secured a house, and bought the furniture of friends of mine in the business, who would favor me in prices. As to bed-linen, carpets and things of that sort, I got them here, in the store at cost. In heaven's name, Smith, is there any reason why a man shouldn't hire his own house and purchase his own furniture?' 'None whatever,' I replied, 'unless it be that his wife desired the same privilege.'

'But she didn't, Smith. Annie said she was glad to leave it to me. I took the dear little woman in my arms and kissed her, and felt my heart lightened of a very heavy load that somehow had rested there since my last interview with her mother. But Mrs. Page's manner is very unpleasant. She is a little snooty, and she accuses me of robbing Annie of any legitimate happiness, but she conveys some such impression to my mind, and it makes me feel like a malefactor. I'm so fond of my wife that the thought of depriving her of the smallest joy is misery to me. 'Well, these little trifles will all come right, Robinson. It isn't as if your mother-in-law lived with you.' 'She's only round the corner, Smith. I thought of that when I took the house, that it would be so comfortable for Annie to live near her old home, and have the attention and advice of her mother. As heaven is my judge, Smith, I have tried to take every burden from my wife, and I opened accounts with the neighboring grocer, butcher, baker, and hired an excellent servant. I have a generous margin for sundries, which I look into rigidly at the first of every month, and settle with the other accounts, when we begin again with a clear fresh record. A woman certainly ought to be happy when she is doing nothing to do but enjoy herself. I've even persuaded her to put all her little expenses down in my book, so that she knows where every penny of her money goes; and, as a preliminary, I take care of the household expenses myself. The servant comes to me every morning for orders before I go to business, so that Annie scarcely knows what she's going to have for dinner. Could a man do more than that, Smith?' 'Perhaps he might do less, Robinson. I'm a miserable bachelor myself, and know nothing about women; but the question is, if you're not getting on the generous side—if you're not taking too much upon yourself.'

'A man can't do too much, Smith, for the woman he adores.' 'Just then a customer came in, and I was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the world. He loved his wife. He even esteemed his mother-in-law. I never saw a man so hard on his mother-in-law as Robinson, and so utterly fair to recommend it to others, as poor Robinson. But he began to be brighter and appreciatively happier. The anniversary of his wedding was close at hand, and he was interested in a gift to his wife. 'I was puzzled what to get,' said Robinson. 'You see she's got almost every thing, Smith; her wedding presents enclosed as many little adornments as I could find. At last I hit upon a black silk dress—a woman can't have too many, and I can get a bargain down to the store just now. She said she'd rather have the money and let it outside; but I persuaded her that would be foolish. So she's coming in to choose the trimmings this afternoon, and if she comes while I'm out you'll take care of her, won't you?' 'With pleasure,' I said, and it so happened that she did come while Robinson was away, and seemed to bring all the sunshine with her. 'I told her that her husband had left her in my care, and begged her to use me in any way that suggested itself to her; that it would be my happiness to serve her. 'I suppose there was an honest error about this declaration that impressed Mrs. Robinson. It so happened that I was able to show her some little favors and attentions in return for the many that her husband had done for me. I had told her I was under obligations to Robinson. Of course I didn't explain that it was in his desire to help me select my hat and coat and boots; it wasn't necessary to enter into these little details, but she understood that a natural gratitude on my part led me to send her in return a few such little favors, or new bouquets, or new music, or opera tickets, once in a while. So she knew the declaration of mine that day at the store, that I would be happy to serve her, came straight from my heart. 'You are so good and kind,' she said. 'Then all at once an eager wish leaped into her eyes. 'I wish I could ask you to do me a favor, Mr. Smith—' 'To grant a favor,' she said. 'Do,' I replied. 'I won't abuse your generosity.' 'Oh! I wonder if I will be right?' she said, clasping her little gloved hands, and looking up in my face with a charming air of indecision. 'I wonder if I ought to do such a thing?' 'The fact that you desire to do it is a proof that it is unselfish,' I replied. 'I do desire it, over so much,' she said; 'and it is perfectly unselfish. I've set upon our marriage anniversary.'

'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson?' 'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson,' she replied, tapping her foot with her parasol, with an air of vexation. She was looking upon the floor now, and a little like Robinson, and my mother-in-law's quarters looked exceedingly dingy and forlorn. 'I don't know how it was, but I took an extraordinary interest in Robinson's marriage, and was sorry to see a cloud on the matrimonial horizon before six months were over. 'We've gone to housekeeping, you know,' said Robinson. 'I was afraid Annie would be agreed to her mother, but Mrs. Page brood with me. It was better to build a little nest of our own. She took the kindest interest in everything, and wanted to go horse-hunting with Annie and to help her pick out the furniture. But I had already secured a house, and bought the furniture of friends of mine in the business, who would favor me in prices. As to bed-linen, carpets and things of that sort, I got them here, in the store at cost. In heaven's name, Smith, is there any reason why a man shouldn't hire his own house and purchase his own furniture?' 'None whatever,' I replied, 'unless it be that his wife desired the same privilege.'

'But she didn't, Smith. Annie said she was glad to leave it to me. I took the dear little woman in my arms and kissed her, and felt my heart lightened of a very heavy load that somehow had rested there since my last interview with her mother. But Mrs. Page's manner is very unpleasant. She is a little snooty, and she accuses me of robbing Annie of any legitimate happiness, but she conveys some such impression to my mind, and it makes me feel like a malefactor. I'm so fond of my wife that the thought of depriving her of the smallest joy is misery to me. 'Well, these little trifles will all come right, Robinson. It isn't as if your mother-in-law lived with you.' 'She's only round the corner, Smith. I thought of that when I took the house, that it would be so comfortable for Annie to live near her old home, and have the attention and advice of her mother. As heaven is my judge, Smith, I have tried to take every burden from my wife, and I opened accounts with the neighboring grocer, butcher, baker, and hired an excellent servant. I have a generous margin for sundries, which I look into rigidly at the first of every month, and settle with the other accounts, when we begin again with a clear fresh record. A woman certainly ought to be happy when she is doing nothing to do but enjoy herself. I've even persuaded her to put all her little expenses down in my book, so that she knows where every penny of her money goes; and, as a preliminary, I take care of the household expenses myself. The servant comes to me every morning for orders before I go to business, so that Annie scarcely knows what she's going to have for dinner. Could a man do more than that, Smith?' 'Perhaps he might do less, Robinson. I'm a miserable bachelor myself, and know nothing about women; but the question is, if you're not getting on the generous side—if you're not taking too much upon yourself.'

'A man can't do too much, Smith, for the woman he adores.' 'Just then a customer came in, and I was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the world. He loved his wife. He even esteemed his mother-in-law. I never saw a man so hard on his mother-in-law as Robinson, and so utterly fair to recommend it to others, as poor Robinson. But he began to be brighter and appreciatively happier. The anniversary of his wedding was close at hand, and he was interested in a gift to his wife. 'I was puzzled what to get,' said Robinson. 'You see she's got almost every thing, Smith; her wedding presents enclosed as many little adornments as I could find. At last I hit upon a black silk dress—a woman can't have too many, and I can get a bargain down to the store just now. She said she'd rather have the money and let it outside; but I persuaded her that would be foolish. So she's coming in to choose the trimmings this afternoon, and if she comes while I'm out you'll take care of her, won't you?' 'With pleasure,' I said, and it so happened that she did come while Robinson was away, and seemed to bring all the sunshine with her. 'I told her that her husband had left her in my care, and begged her to use me in any way that suggested itself to her; that it would be my happiness to serve her. 'I suppose there was an honest error about this declaration that impressed Mrs. Robinson. It so happened that I was able to show her some little favors and attentions in return for the many that her husband had done for me. I had told her I was under obligations to Robinson. Of course I didn't explain that it was in his desire to help me select my hat and coat and boots; it wasn't necessary to enter into these little details, but she understood that a natural gratitude on my part led me to send her in return a few such little favors, or new bouquets, or new music, or opera tickets, once in a while. So she knew the declaration of mine that day at the store, that I would be happy to serve her, came straight from my heart. 'You are so good and kind,' she said. 'Then all at once an eager wish leaped into her eyes. 'I wish I could ask you to do me a favor, Mr. Smith—' 'To grant a favor,' she said. 'Do,' I replied. 'I won't abuse your generosity.' 'Oh! I wonder if I will be right?' she said, clasping her little gloved hands, and looking up in my face with a charming air of indecision. 'I wonder if I ought to do such a thing?' 'The fact that you desire to do it is a proof that it is unselfish,' I replied. 'I do desire it, over so much,' she said; 'and it is perfectly unselfish. I've set upon our marriage anniversary.'

'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson?' 'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson,' she replied, tapping her foot with her parasol, with an air of vexation. She was looking upon the floor now, and a little like Robinson, and my mother-in-law's quarters looked exceedingly dingy and forlorn. 'I don't know how it was, but I took an extraordinary interest in Robinson's marriage, and was sorry to see a cloud on the matrimonial horizon before six months were over. 'We've gone to housekeeping, you know,' said Robinson. 'I was afraid Annie would be agreed to her mother, but Mrs. Page brood with me. It was better to build a little nest of our own. She took the kindest interest in everything, and wanted to go horse-hunting with Annie and to help her pick out the furniture. But I had already secured a house, and bought the furniture of friends of mine in the business, who would favor me in prices. As to bed-linen, carpets and things of that sort, I got them here, in the store at cost. In heaven's name, Smith, is there any reason why a man shouldn't hire his own house and purchase his own furniture?' 'None whatever,' I replied, 'unless it be that his wife desired the same privilege.'

'But she didn't, Smith. Annie said she was glad to leave it to me. I took the dear little woman in my arms and kissed her, and felt my heart lightened of a very heavy load that somehow had rested there since my last interview with her mother. But Mrs. Page's manner is very unpleasant. She is a little snooty, and she accuses me of robbing Annie of any legitimate happiness, but she conveys some such impression to my mind, and it makes me feel like a malefactor. I'm so fond of my wife that the thought of depriving her of the smallest joy is misery to me. 'Well, these little trifles will all come right, Robinson. It isn't as if your mother-in-law lived with you.' 'She's only round the corner, Smith. I thought of that when I took the house, that it would be so comfortable for Annie to live near her old home, and have the attention and advice of her mother. As heaven is my judge, Smith, I have tried to take every burden from my wife, and I opened accounts with the neighboring grocer, butcher, baker, and hired an excellent servant. I have a generous margin for sundries, which I look into rigidly at the first of every month, and settle with the other accounts, when we begin again with a clear fresh record. A woman certainly ought to be happy when she is doing nothing to do but enjoy herself. I've even persuaded her to put all her little expenses down in my book, so that she knows where every penny of her money goes; and, as a preliminary, I take care of the household expenses myself. The servant comes to me every morning for orders before I go to business, so that Annie scarcely knows what she's going to have for dinner. Could a man do more than that, Smith?' 'Perhaps he might do less, Robinson. I'm a miserable bachelor myself, and know nothing about women; but the question is, if you're not getting on the generous side—if you're not taking too much upon yourself.'

'A man can't do too much, Smith, for the woman he adores.' 'Just then a customer came in, and I was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the world. He loved his wife. He even esteemed his mother-in-law. I never saw a man so hard on his mother-in-law as Robinson, and so utterly fair to recommend it to others, as poor Robinson. But he began to be brighter and appreciatively happier. The anniversary of his wedding was close at hand, and he was interested in a gift to his wife. 'I was puzzled what to get,' said Robinson. 'You see she's got almost every thing, Smith; her wedding presents enclosed as many little adornments as I could find. At last I hit upon a black silk dress—a woman can't have too many, and I can get a bargain down to the store just now. She said she'd rather have the money and let it outside; but I persuaded her that would be foolish. So she's coming in to choose the trimmings this afternoon, and if she comes while I'm out you'll take care of her, won't you?' 'With pleasure,' I said, and it so happened that she did come while Robinson was away, and seemed to bring all the sunshine with her. 'I told her that her husband had left her in my care, and begged her to use me in any way that suggested itself to her; that it would be my happiness to serve her. 'I suppose there was an honest error about this declaration that impressed Mrs. Robinson. It so happened that I was able to show her some little favors and attentions in return for the many that her husband had done for me. I had told her I was under obligations to Robinson. Of course I didn't explain that it was in his desire to help me select my hat and coat and boots; it wasn't necessary to enter into these little details, but she understood that a natural gratitude on my part led me to send her in return a few such little favors, or new bouquets, or new music, or opera tickets, once in a while. So she knew the declaration of mine that day at the store, that I would be happy to serve her, came straight from my heart. 'You are so good and kind,' she said. 'Then all at once an eager wish leaped into her eyes. 'I wish I could ask you to do me a favor, Mr. Smith—' 'To grant a favor,' she said. 'Do,' I replied. 'I won't abuse your generosity.' 'Oh! I wonder if I will be right?' she said, clasping her little gloved hands, and looking up in my face with a charming air of indecision. 'I wonder if I ought to do such a thing?' 'The fact that you desire to do it is a proof that it is unselfish,' I replied. 'I do desire it, over so much,' she said; 'and it is perfectly unselfish. I've set upon our marriage anniversary.'

'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson?' 'Is that all, Mrs. Robinson,' she replied, tapping her foot with her parasol, with an air of vexation. She was looking upon the floor now, and a little like Robinson, and my mother-in-law's quarters looked exceedingly dingy and forlorn. 'I don't know how it was, but I took an extraordinary interest in Robinson's marriage, and was sorry to see a cloud on the matrimonial horizon before six months were over. 'We've gone to housekeeping, you know,' said Robinson. 'I was afraid Annie would be agreed to her mother, but Mrs. Page brood with me. It was better to build a little nest of our own. She took the kindest interest in everything, and wanted to go horse-hunting with Annie and to help her pick out the furniture. But I had already secured a house, and bought the furniture of friends of mine in the business, who would favor me in prices. As to bed-linen, carpets and things of that sort, I got them here, in the store at cost. In heaven's name, Smith, is there any reason why a man shouldn't hire his own house and purchase his own furniture?' 'None whatever,' I replied, 'unless it be that his wife desired the same privilege.'

'But she didn't, Smith. Annie said she was glad to leave it to me. I took the dear little woman in my arms and kissed her, and felt my heart lightened of a very heavy load that somehow had rested there since my last interview with her mother. But Mrs. Page's manner is very unpleasant. She is a little snooty, and she accuses me of robbing Annie of any legitimate happiness, but she conveys some such impression to my mind, and it makes me feel like a malefactor. I'm so fond of my wife that the thought of depriving her of the smallest joy is misery to me. 'Well, these little trifles will all come right, Robinson. It isn't as if your mother-in-law lived with you.' 'She's only round the corner, Smith. I thought of that when I took the house, that it would be so comfortable for Annie to live near her old home, and have the attention and advice of her mother. As heaven is my judge, Smith, I have tried to take every burden from my wife, and I opened accounts with the neighboring grocer, butcher, baker, and hired an excellent servant. I have a generous margin for sundries, which I look into rigidly at the first of every month, and settle with the other accounts, when we begin again with a clear fresh record. A woman certainly ought to be happy when she is doing nothing to do but enjoy herself. I've even persuaded her to put all her little expenses down in my book, so that she knows where every penny of her money goes; and, as a preliminary, I take care of the household expenses myself. The servant comes to me every morning for orders before I go to business, so that Annie scarcely knows what she's going to have for dinner. Could a man do more than that, Smith?' 'Perhaps he might do less, Robinson. I'm a miserable bachelor myself, and know nothing about women; but the question is, if you're not getting on the generous side—if you're not taking too much upon yourself.'

'A man can't do too much, Smith, for the woman he adores.' 'Just then a customer came in, and I was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the world. He loved his wife. He even esteemed his mother-in-law. I never saw a man so hard on his mother-in-law as Robinson, and so utterly fair to recommend it to others, as poor Robinson. But he began to be brighter and appreciatively happier. The anniversary of his wedding was close at hand, and he was interested in a gift to his wife. 'I was puzzled what to get,' said Robinson. 'You see she's got almost every thing, Smith; her wedding presents enclosed as many little adornments as I could find. At last I hit upon a black silk dress—a woman can't have too many, and I can get a bargain down to the store just now. She said she'd rather have the money and let it outside; but I persuaded her that would be foolish. So she's coming in to choose the trimmings this afternoon,