Citizens of New Orleans are raising a fund of $30,000 with which to erect a monument to the late General Beauregard.

Chatham, N.B.

Newcastle Field Battery of Artillery, Lt.-Col. Call commanding, went under canvass at Camp Fortune for annual drill on 4th inst. and were marched out yesterday forenoon 12th. The ground on which their encampment was located is the most convenient they have yet occupied as a local camp. It is the old Fortune field near to the I.C.R. track running to the deep water terminus, Newcastle, overlooks the marsh and the river, and is particularly convenient for firing practice, the guns being stationed not a hundred yards from the tents, for that purpose.

The total strength of the battery as shown by the marching in state was sixty-seven officers, non-commissioned officers and men as follows:—

Lt. Col. Call, commanding.
Captain, R. L. Maltby.
Surgeon, F. L. Pedolin.
Vet. Surgeon, John Morrissey.
2nd Lieutenants, Chas. Sargeant, and M. P. Smith.

On Tuesday Capt. Hudon, inspecting officer, arrived in camp and in the forenoon, inspected the battery in marching past, field movements, sword drill, gun drill, kit examination and officers' questions. In the afternoon he examined the non-commissioned officers in their questions and inspected the range firing practice, which latter embraced forty rounds of common shell and sharpnel, the ranges being found on the guns being brought into action without previous knowledge of the distance. The targets were placed near the middle of the Northwest river, between the Newcastle shore and Beaubair's Island, and the distance ascertained by firing was from 1575 to 1750 yards. Some excellent marksmanship was shown in the practice.

Before the Battery was dismissed, after range firing practice, the inspection being ended, Colonel Call briefly addressed the officers and men, expressing his satisfaction with the creditable manner in which they had discharged their duties and generally conducted themselves in camp.

Major Armstrong, paymaster, arrived in camp on Tuesday afternoon. He had a general muster of all the men, horses, etc., and did his work with his usual thoroughness and expedition. The officers' mess was one of the best we have yet seen. It was in the comfortable residence of Mr. W. C. Anslow, near the camp ground, and the mess room and its appointments, as well as the menu, rendered this important adjunct of camp life a decided attraction.

Batteries situated as that of Newcastle is, seem to be at a great disadvantage in having to compete, in efficiency, with others in the Dominion which are afforded much greater facilities by the government for perfecting themselves in their work. Urban batteries, for instance, have commodious and well appointed drill sheds, where they have opportunity to learn standing gun drill, and many other things which familiarise them with their duties. The Newcastle and other rural batteries have no such advantages as these, and the wonder is that they display as much knowledge of tactics and drill as they do. The period of eight days' drill, even, leaves them only about four days for effective instruction, for they devote one day to marching in, one to inspection, one is Sunday and the eighth is marching out day. The wonder is that with more than a third of the battery composed of new men, such a fine state of efficiency as was displayed on Tuesday was shown.

The camp was the centre of quite a popular interest, if one may judge of it in this respect by the visitors present on Tuesday. Colonel Call found time, although his duties as field officer on that day, were quite exciting, to welcome his many friends, and his courteous example was followed, as opportunity permitted by all ranks, and it is needless to say that the uniform of the service seemed to have lost none of its potency as a factor in attracting the fair friends of the gallant wearers. The neatly kept tents, the well groomed horses—all fine large ones, with Clydes predominating—the portable stalls, the cooking trenches, the temporary bridges, etc., gave the non-military visitors an idea of soldier life that was an interesting and instructive object lesson, and one calculated to make them feel that they have reason to be proud of the loyalty, zeal and efficiency of the veteran Colonel Call, his officers and men, who compose one of the best rural batteries of the Dominion.—Chatham, N. B., Advance.

Belleville.

The Quinte Fair, following the footsteps of other exhibition organizations offered a good and patriotic attraction to their visitors in the shape of a sham fight.

The 15th Battalion under command of Major Ponton, mustered some 200 men and with No. 1 Co. of the 49th, under Lieut Watt made a very creditable showing.
