FORESTRY

Mr. Brian O'Kurley (Elk Island): Mr. Speaker, Alberta must diversify its economy. One way to do this is to maximize the economic potential of our forestry sector. In Alberta a successful pulp and paper industry will create as many jobs as the energy boom of the 1970s.

While this economic growth is valuable, it is also important to recognize that our natural environment is limited in its capacity to sustain this growth. Both our economy and our environment are important. Recent announcements by industry have demonstrated its commitment to responsible development through investments in new environmental technology. This is a positive step.

Our challenge is to find a balance between greatly needed economic growth and responsible and reasonable consideration for the protection of our environment. Let's work together to support the concept of sustainable economic development. Let's work together to build a better future for our children. Let's work together for a better Canada.

MR. HAROLD MILLER

Mr. Fred J. Mifflin (Bonavista—Trinity—Conception): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding Newfoundlander. On November 6, 1987, on a dark stormy night in the Atlantic, a crew member of the vessel Atlantic Elizabeth fell overboard, lost consciousness and was only saved from drowning by a shipmate who, at great risk to his own life, recovered the drowning sailor in heavy seas.

Nine years previously, on November 20, the Danish trawler Remoy, with a ship's company of 12, ran aground in Labrador on a dark stormy night with winds at 100 kilometres an hour and a temperature of minus 23 degrees centigrade. Three men volunteered to go to their rescue and through a death-defying feat of seamanship and courage they successfully and miraculously achieved the rescue in less than 12 hours after the Remoy ran aground.

One of the three brave men involved in this incident was the man who also rescued his drowning crew member nine years ago. Mr. Speaker, I speak of Mr. Harold Miller of Burgoyne's Cove in my riding. He was awarded the Cross of Valour for his 1978 incredible act of bravery at the age of 22 years, and for his 1986 repeated act of courage he was awarded the Medal of Bravery.

Nine hundred and fifty-eight people have received the Medal of Bravery. Fifteen people have been awarded the Cross of Valour. Mr. Miller is the only Canadian who has the extraordinary distinction of having been awarded both.

I am proud to have Mr. Miller as a constituent. On behalf of all Canadians I thank him and I would ask that my colleagues on all sides of the House join me in extending our congratulations to him.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

KOREAN WAR

Mr. W. C. Scott (Victoria—Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, Canada's participation in the First and Second World Wars has been well documented by our own Department of Veterans Affairs and by the private film companies across Canada.

Until now not very much has been produced on our country's participation in the Korean War between 1950 and 1953. As a matter of fact, within only the past few years we were all referring to that war as the "Korean conflict".

Today that has all changed. Our Korean veterans are Canada's youngest veterans and, thanks to the War Amputations of Canada and its chief executive officer, Mr. Chadderton, we now have the latest of their "Never Again" series of films called "Korea—Canada's Forgotten War".

This film shows viewers of the battle areas and the monuments to those who died in Korea. These are all part of our nation's history and, I am sorry to say, a war that up until now Canadians knew very little about.

This film, along with others produced by the War Amputations of Canada, expresses to all Canadians the thought on our minds during this particular time of the year: "In a war everyone suffers. We must never let it happen again."
