One cannot dogmatize about the future, but progress in the past has been so steadily in one direction that the probabilities at least are in favor of that direction being followed. In a word, it is a history not of revolution, but of growth. The British example of freedom broadening slowly down from precedent to precedent has been followed in this country. It has often been said that the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign found Canada in rebellion, and the end found the country not only satisfied,but heartily in favor of British connection. To what was that happy result due? Revolutionary ideas were abandoned on the one hand; attempts to check the inevitable growth of self-government were abandoned on the other. Self-government were abandoned on the other. Self-government as it was called.

Was granted with many misgivings, 50me British statesmen feared that it meant separation; some were quite resigned to that course. Few indeed were those who could reconcile local self-government with Imperial unity.

were those who could reconcile local self-government with Imperial unity, and Lord Elgin's utterances on this subject give him the very highest rank in statesmanship.

Still the growth went on. The old legislative union soon proved to be too small a flower-pot to hold the thriving Canadian maple. Upper Canada began to compain of French domination, as the old Reformers had complained of Downing-street domination. The remedy was found in federalizing the union, and giving each section—now Ontario and Quebec—power to manage certain concerns of its own. This was a companied by a great territorial expansion, the Maritime Provinces being taken in, and shortly afterwards the Northwest Territories. East Toronto, Nov. 19.—Venison was the staple article at the fourth annual supper given by the Y.M.C.A. Ladies' Aux.liary, in their hall, to-night. There were roast venison, venison steak, ven.son ple and several other forms of venison food, each and all, with accessories, being quickly disposed of by the 250 game-hungry people that thronged the tables in relays. Fresident Mrs. E. M. Cook, with Mestames McHattle, Young, Lloyd, Miss Stibbard and o.hersi looked well after the comfort of their guests, assisted by Fred Ratellife. It was 9 o'clock when the 'mighty hunter,' Mayor Dr. Waiters, took the chair, and, after a few complimentary remarks as to the work of the Indies and the success of the 'supper,'' proceeded with the program, which was a good one and quite extens ve. Among those taking part were: Miss Davidson, Miss Mae Dickenson, Waller Murtor, A. Y. Grant, Miss Fritz, Miss Modeland and W. A. Bray. Much credit is due to the ladies for their work, which led to so great a success. The Y.M.C.A. l.brary will doubtless be greatly enlarged, as the proceeds of the supper will be used for that purpose.
