FOR PROHIBITION

Good Gathering in Wellington Street Methodist Church.

Addresses by Organizer Marshall, Rev. T. S. Johnson, Rev. Jos. Edge and Ald. Winnett.

A successful prohibition rally was held in the Wellington Street Methodist Church last evening. There was a fair attendance, the major portion of it being comprised of ladies. Those present manifested great enthusiasm, and displayed keen interest, frequently applauding the speakers. Ald. Winnett occupied the chair, and Mr. Samuel Grigg led in prayer. After a few remarks on the question by Ald. Winnett, Miss Golding sang a solo in an effective manner. Organizer Marshall, of Toronto, in his opening remarks, said he thought there was much need for active and earnest work. The opportunity of voting on this great question might never come about again. A defeat of prohibition at the present time would be a terrible thing, and perhaps mean a setback for a quarter of a century. People should and must stand by their noral convictions and principles, and in that case a glorious victory was certain. It only needed a few years of a prohibitory law here, and the peowould see its benefits and would never have any other law, no matter how many votes were taken on the issue. People say "Prohibition in-fringes on personal liberty." When When this law passes not one word will be in it to tell a man what he has to drink. "We are," said the speaker, "going to the root of the evil, in trying to put a stop to the manufacture and sale of the cause of so much waste and misery. This will inconvenience some men, but the majority of this country have to rule." Marshall here sharply criticised the anti-prohibition literature, and cited an instance where a card, given around by the antis, stated that if prohibition carried it would make many perjurers and spies. This, he stated, practically admitted that the liquor men would perjure themselves if the measure passed. "If they do," said the speak-er, "they will be landed where they ought to be-in the penitentiary." plause.) "Now these men," said he, are quoting Prof. Goldwin Smith and Prof. Grant, who are strong advocates of moral suasion. Well, God help the people of this country if they have to depend on moral suasion from Gold-

win Smith. Let them come forward and work, and not keep quiet until election time, and then raise a howl. If these men were honest they would practice what they preach, and if they can't do this, let them keep quiet. They are stumbling-blocks in the way of temperance advancement. If you show indifference and negligence in this matter, how can you face your God at the judgment? This is your opportunity of wiping out the most terrible of all blots on our fair land, and every true man should take advantage of it. If prohibition should be defeated on the 29th, let every man here tonight be able to say that he did his duty and that his hands are clean. 'Dare to be a Daniel,' and fight the battle of the people in the interests of humanity. Throw off your coat and get into the fight like men. It is a bad business, utterly bad, and we want it entirely wiped out. It retards our national progress at every step. Our opponents talk of direct taxation. No government is going to impose any such thing, for they would be turned out, and well they know this. You need have no fear from that direction, as our politicians of today are too clever to commit an act that would endanger themselves. This is the greatest moral question that has even been before the people of this Dominion, and 'Canada expects every man to do his duty' on the 29th day of September. Rouse up, every one of you to do your duty, and a glorious victory will reward us." (Applause.)

Rev. Thomas S. Johnson followed with a brief address. He was convinced that there was no man present that would not vote for prohibition; but they should go forth and influence others. What was wanted was that the convictions of the people be put in practice. He was praying that God would dispose man to vote for prohibition, and if so, a grand victory was assured. "God is giving us an opportunity for which we should be grateful," said the speaker. "I want prohibition to pass, so that the poor drunkard may have a chance to reform." He closed by calling upon every man to stand true and vote for prohibition on the 29th. Rev. Joseph Edge also made a few remarks. Mr. George gave a temperance recitation during the evening, which was much appreciated.

During the meeting Chairman Winnett said he was sorry to see so few men present, but hoped the ladies would influence those who had stopped away.

Mr. Daly's Reply.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: Mr. Haselgrove, a prominent cigar manufacturer, sees fit to criticise my letter in reference to Hon. Joseph Howe's great temperance (?) oration delivered 44 years ago in the Nova Scotia Legislature. In a vein of irony I said, "So well does it champion the cause of the poor drunkard and his wretched family" that it is now being used as a campaign sheet in the liquor interests. Mr. Haselgrove blandly writes, "I have personally read the speech referred to, and cannot find any such championship therein." Of course not! The poor drunkard and his family are the last persons Mr. Howe and men of that ilk think When we, therefore, point out that Mr. Howe's speech, and the letters of Dr. Grant and Mr. Goldwin Smith are not written in behalf of the victims of the traffic, but in the interests of the liquor dealers, and used as campaign sheets, we are called "cranks," "fan-atics" and "intolerant pleaders" for class legislation.

PROHIBITION IN KANSAS. Mr Haselgrove asserts that our circular, "Prohibition in Kansas," admits that only the open saloon has been abolished in that State. The following are a few verbatim quotations from the circular itself, and show how unfair the above statement is: 1. The law is efficiently and successfully enforced. 2. Not one-tenth of the amount of liquor is not used. 3. It has more than met the expectations of its warmest friends. 4 Fully nine-tenths of the drinking and drunkenness have been abolished. CHRIST AND THE TRAFFIC. Now it is claimed by Mr. Haselgrove and others that our Lord was in favor of the unital that he participated in it. in favor of the drink traffic, in fact class tavern consisting chiefly of a reception-room, sitting-room and barroom combined. Across one end the bar, behind which are rows of bottles -rum, gin, beer, brandy and whisky A number of men lounging about; some drinking, some filling the room with smoke, others with curses; the floor decorated with large spittoons Over in stained with tobacco juice. one corner a couple of old scaks (the finished product), blear-eyed, disheveled hair and ragged garments; ever and anon uttering their incoherent ejaculations; a source amusement to the callous and indifferent, but a spectacle for angels to weep over.

Now, can we imagine the One, "who was not willing that any should per-ish," looking upon such a scene with even the least degree of tolerance? Can we fancy him dealing out the poisonous stuff which transforms a boy (the joy of a mother's heart) into one of those drunken sots? Imagination revolts at the idea.

In connection with the miracle at Cana, we would call Mr. Haselgrove's attention to the fact that there is now no question, amongst eminent scholars who have investigated the subject, but that in our Saviour's time there were two kinds of wine in common and unfermented. use-fermented While the Scripture record is silent on this point the whole character, life and mission of Jesus give the reverant Christian but one option. supposition that he deliberately manufactured intoxicating drink, to mar the festivities of a marriage ceremony, is intolerable, especially when we are told that the guests had already consumed large quantities of this liquid before the first supply was exhausted. Mr. Haselgrove argues that I hold the drinking of wine to be a "sin." I made no such assertion. Anyway, in passing a state prohibitory law we do not ask whether the drinking of wine is a sin, but whether the public traffic is a menace to the state. "Sin" is a violation of the divine law. Each man must settle that for himself. I judge no man. "To his own Master he standeth or falleth." THE STATE AND THE TRAFFIC. Mr. Haselgrove thinks I admitted that drinking would not be interfered with, when I said that the law would deal with the public manufacture and sale and not with a man's private habits. I made no such admission. I was simply pointing out the rational basis upon which a prohibitory law would rest. The state does not deal directly with a man's private habits; it lays its hands upon a public traffic which is a menace to the state and a destructive force acting upon society, causing more orime and pauperism than pestilence, famine, and Fellow-electors, if the traffic is a good thing, then push it along, and use your vote and influence in its behalf; but if it is "a great evil," as 99 out of every 100 admit, then vote "Yes" on Thursday next. F. W. DALY.

AMUSÉMENTS

In "The Real Widow Brown," the attraction at the Grand tonight, not a moment is permitted to go by unenlivened by merriment, contagious humor and infectious song. By the plot a very attractive widow is represented as hideous by a masquerading young man in order to befog a rich old father and get into the good graces of his two lovely daughters, and song and dance incidentally afford entertainment of the rollicksome nature.

The early appearance here of the favorite comedian, Sol Smith Russell, has been announced. This is always an agreeable bit of news to the many friends and admirers of this wholesome actor. Mr. Russell's appearance will be doubly attractive this season for the reason that he will offer an entirely new play, in which he has an opportunity to display his quaint acting to better advantage than in anything he has been seen in for some time. This new play was written for Mr. Russell by Martha Morton, who also furnished him with "A Bachelor's Romance." Everybody who saw "A Bachelor's Romance" will, of course, want to see Miss Morton's latest effort. The new play has been christened "Uncle Dick."

Mis Dorothy Decker, the charming chausonette, who appears with the Gorman Bros, in their new version of "Mr. Beane from Boston" Grand on Saturday, matinee and night, will render several musical numbers written expressly for her, and entirely new to this city.

Ross O'Neal, who created the part of Lieutenant Cranbourne in the original production of "Humanity" in New York city, is still a member of the "Humanity" company, which comes to the Grand next Friday. The reserved seat sale opens tomorrow.

Effle Shannon, who appears at the Grand with Herbert Kelcey on Thursday evening, is said to be thoroughly versed in the significance of all the signs and omens attending brides and weddings. She was forced to learn them, so as to answer the various in-quiries while "The Moth and the Flame" was running at the Lyceum Theater, New York.
