HINDENBURG'S DEPOT BATTALION LATEST MOVES

Lieut.-Col. J. L. Youngs, M.C., for- Allies Repulse Attacks and Improve Lines.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—Von Hindenburg, to whom the next move has thus far been conceded, is holding his hand. It seems passing strange that the enemy has not made any big drive before this, and it will be stranger still if many days pass without a renewal of the offensive. There is no doubt that the Germans are anxious to begin operations as soon as possible, and the delay—if such it may be termed—indicates the probability of an extensive push being in preparation. preparation.

The completion of the enemy's plans

The completion of the enemy's plans undoubtedly has been hampered greatly by the excellent counter-work of the Allies, particularly in the aviation and artillery branches, but even this could hardly hold back an attack indefinitely.

Signs Not Wanting.

There are many signs that point to a violent attack, such as ushered in the offensive of March 21, and a large part of the battlefront would be involved, if what seems to be the present plans of the Germans were put into execution.

The Germans have recently made some most extravagant claims in their wireless dispatches regarding the British casualties, it being asserted that "enormous losses" had been suffered by the various British units on the Lys and Somme battlefronts.

MUST SOON SHOW HAND.
WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, May 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—The waiting attitude of the Allies is expected to compet the enemy to show his hand very

the enemy to show his hand very shortly.

The Germans have brought a large number of fresh divisions into the line facing Amiens, indicating preparation for action in that locality, but they have shown few signs thus far of beginning an offensive. General von Below's army remains quiescent in the vicinity of Arras. Each time the enemy has attempted to feel the strenth of the Allied forces recently, either north or south of the Somme, he has suffered a severe setback, causing him to hesitate to undertake a new operation on a large scale. He has learned by hard experience that the Allies are prepared. General Foch's army is now absolutely unified, without distinction as to nationality. It is fully acquainted with German tactical methods and ready to meet them. Any German operation having the nature of a surprise is improbable, but it is felt the enemy must soon make another effort to reach the objectives for which he set out on March 21 and has thus far not attained.

scholars attended the evening service in a body, occupying the gallery. Under the direction of J. Parnell Morris, with D. C. Couke, leader of the Philharmonic Orchestra, and Mrs. (Dr.) Routledge at the organ, the music was a special feature of the services. At the evening service "O Canada" was one of the selections, and the audience joined heartily in its singing.

Rev. C. F. Logan had intended giving in the morning an illustrated address on "A Photograph of Life," but met with a mishap in the preparation of the illustration, and he gave instead an address on "Christ, the Magnet." Does Not Belleve "Fool Theories."
"We are on the threshold of the greatest day the world has ever seen.
While I do not believe in any fool theory of a millennium or a battle of Armagaddon, I think the war had to come, and it will have its part in bringing about the new order of things." Thus did Mr. Logan refer, in part, to the pres-The sender must place on the wrapper, below his name and address, the following indorsement: "This parcel contains only articles sent at the approved request of the addressee, which are some lessons which ought to be earned from the war.
