

IN CONCLUSION,

Your Committee wish that every member of the church would take a hearty interest in the working of this Society. It has before it, objects that should be dear to every member of our congregations, — the strengthening the hands of the clergy, the building up of the church of our fathers, and the bringing its ministrations within the reach of all its scattered people, throughout the Island.

The small funds entrusted to their hands, have permitted your Committee at present to do but little. Your Committee are aware that other objects demand attention and require support, and that the liberality of the churchmen in Charlottetown is not to be measured by the funds of this Society; but, whilst permitted to express thankfulness for the increase of subscription this year, they cannot avoid urging upon church members, in town and country, the necessity of devising still more liberal things, so that more help may be afforded to the destitute, and provision made for the decent maintenance of public worship amongst our poor and neglected people.
