Prizes for Naming Moving Picture Stars

Imperial Theatre Starts A Novelty Contest Next Monday Are You a Movie Fan? And If So, How Many Stars Do You Think You Know By Sight?

The Imperial is going to give you an opportunity next week to cash in on your powers of discernment. In other words, it is going to hold a Grand Movie Contest.

The animated portrait of fifty stars will be reeled off on the screen and you must recognize them to win a prize.

Perhaps not all of them, for of course, there will be some sticklers—else there would be no contest—but to the ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls naming correctly the largest percentage we will give wonderfully fine awards.

This scheme is eliciting a furore of interest in Boston theatres at the present time, a large number in New York and beyond. Our Montreal star house, the Imperial, has just concluded a similar contest.

As each patron enters the doorway he or she will be given a card upon which to write the names of the stars as their faces flit across the silver sheet. You will be given plenty of time to decide upon each portrait and besides the zest of trying to win a prize it will prove a novel diversion.

Lights will be turned up so you can see to write and for fifteen minutes the theatre will be vocal with excitement. At any rate that is what is happening elsewhere.

The Imperial is not alone in introducing this novelty stunt. Several leading firms, as mentioned in the preceding list, are entering into the contest as prize donors with a gleeful spirit and we figure the whole thing is going to stir up quite a little community pep.

Following is the list of prizes and by whom donated:

A RADIO SET, the famous Victor Northern model, donated by The Energy Electric Company.

BANJO-UKULELE and Five Professional Lessons, donated by Phonograph Salon.

DRAWING-ROOM FLOOR LAMP, or choice of Bridge Lamp, donated by J. Marcus.

TUBULAR RACING SKATES on Boots, donated by Emerson Bros. Ltd.

SMOKER SET, a rich and exclusive gift from the splendid stock of W. H. Thorne & Company, Ltd.

IMPERIAL THEATRE PASS, good for six months exclusive of road attractions.
