DESCRIBES WORK OF SCOTLAND YARD

Sir William Horwood Says
Novelists Apply Name to Only One Branch.

New York, May 23.—Brig. Gen. Sir William T. F. Horwood, Commissioner of Police of Scotland Yard, London, who was here for the international police conference, called for Liverpool on the White Star liner Celtic. He said that he had enjoyed his twenty-day visit in New York. Police Commissioner Enright and other officers of the department, with the police band and glee singers, gave the British police head a send-off at the pier.

Sir William thanked Detective Sergeant Bernard J. Flood for the care he had taken of him in New York, and told Commissioner Enright of the work done by Flood in France during the war in co-operation with the Scotland Yard forces detecting spies.

Just before the liner sailed a messenger rushed to the ship with a box of chocolates, which he handed to Dr. T. W. H. Atkins, the ship's surgeon. Sir William, who looked very "fit", remarked that he had perfectly recovered from the effects of the chocolates he had eaten in London a few weeks ago. In the statement prepared for reporters, the London Commissioner of Police said:

"The police system of Great Britain dates back over 1,000 years to the days of Alfred the Great, who appointed great officers, or carls, to assist and keep the King's peace. This system has grown to the present day, when the counties and boroughs, with the sole exception of the police of London, which is responsible through its commission to the Secretary of State.

"I listened with great interest to the address given by Judge MeAdoo regarding the law relative to firearms, and afterwards discussed this subject at length with him and luckily had a copy of the English Firearms Act with me which I could give him. This law makes regulations for the manufacture and sale of firearms, and delegates to the police the granting or refusing of a permit to carry arms. The law has been of great assistance to the police in the prevention of crime.

"One of the most interesting addresses was that on traffic and street accidents. London, like New York, has its traffic problems, caused by the placing and collection of more vehicles on the streets than the streets can possibly hold. Anyone must realize that your Commissioner has a greater task to surmount than I have in London.

"I have frequently been asked during my stay what is Scotland Yard? Scotland Yard is the headquarters of the Metropolitan Police. It is there that the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis is assisted by four paid Deputy Assistant Commissioners and roughly 250 subordinate police officers and civil servants to carry out the duties of recruiting, organization and discipline of the 21,500 men who form the force.

"Each Assistant Commissioner has certain duties assigned to him by the Commissioner, one being charged with command of the celebrated Criminal Investigation Department, around which novelists have wound the synonyms of 'Scotland Yard'. The C. I. D. consists of 1,000 men, all recruited from the uniform branch of the force, and with the exception of about eighty distributed over the twenty-two divisions of the Metropolitan Police District. The eighty belonging to headquarters are at Scotland Yard, and are specialists in particular forms of crime. It is open to any Superintendent of a division who has any particular grave crime on hand to ask me to detail one or more of these men to assist him.

"I am also prepared to send a small detachment of these men outside the Metropolitan Police District, to assist any Chief Constable of the United Kingdom who requires assistance and writes or telephones me that he requires it.

"We do not thrust ourselves on the other forces for this purpose, but most chief constables in the United Kingdom from time to time avail themselves of our services. The population of the Metropolitan Police District, roughly 8,000,000, spread over an area of 700 square miles, is not so cosmopolitan as that of New York. Serious crimes

ARE YOU PROUD OF YOUR HOME?

They were returning in the street car from a bridge party—John and his wife—and for some reason although it had been a perfectly good party, both John and Margaret felt more than a trifle glum. "I guess we'll have to learn the new dances," said Margaret wisely, after a long silence. "And we'll take a few lessons in bridge," said John gloomily. There was another silence—then the wife burst out: "Oh, we're behind the times all along the line—that's the trouble. We scarcely get invited out any more. Our house is dowdy and out of date. I don't care to invite people into it, and its years since you asked anybody. People don't come by themselves. They forget that we're alive. We don't count any more."

Have you a house that lacks the social spirit? Take a leaf from the book of John and Margaret. They began with the bedroom. Later they renovated their home throughout with beautiful modern furniture. Today it is the centre of their social circle activities. And they were surprised to find that an automobile would have cost them more than all their new furnishings.

A Solid Black Walnut Bedroom Suite, similar to illustration, without chair and rocker, five pieces, etc., a regular $425 Suite, now $297. Bedroom Suites and Dining Room Suites in latest styles, just arrived and all marked down. Come in and see us. See our windows for bargains.

such as murders are not so frequent. In 1922 twenty-six murders were committed; thirteen of the murderers afterward committed suicide before the arrival of the police, and of the other thirteen all were brought to justice."

Colonel William E. Wood, head of the New York Police Reserve; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Untermyer of New York, and the members of the Little Nellie Kelly company, which is to open in London at the Oxford Theatre, were also passengers on the Celtic.
