

music class among fine people, and every time that I put a dollar in my pocket, I feel thankful that Mr. William Murdoch decided to leave his money towards the founding of the institution in which I received such an excellent training."

From William Malone, Halifax. "I have always striven to make an honest living and have done so."

From Ainsley Shaw, Musquodoboit, N. S. "My business is slowly but surely increasing, and I have sold thirty to forty per cent more goods this year than last. I am doing my level best to prosper, and I believe that with plenty of help from above and perseverance on my part I will succeed."

From William Porter, Falmouth. "I have done a good business as a brush maker, but believing that I can make more money I am now starting a lath and shingle factory and have no fear of failure. I used to sit in a chimney corner and mourn my loss of sight, now, thanks to you and the institution, I am leading a busy, active life, and haven't time to think whether I can or cannot see."

To the foregoing I could add many other evidences of the success of our graduates, but these will suffice at present. The question in which I am at present most interested is whether the means will be forthcoming to provide accommodation and a like training for all the blind girls and boys of these provinces who are at an age to receive it. The institution is becoming better known and parents are beginning to appreciate its advantages to one and all of those whose loss of sight prevents their attending the public schools.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Respectfully yours,

C. F. FRASER.
