Russia Urges the Sultan On-Insurgents Preparing For Winter Campaign-Great Suffering

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Sofia correspondent of the Times says the insurgents have laid up large stores of provisions in the mountains and even contemplate a winter campaign. The suffering to the women and children thereby entailed will be appailing, but the insurgent leaders believe that the ill clad Turkish troops will suffer more than themselves, owing to their inability to obtain supplies in a devastated country with interrupted communications. He continues: "Any active interference by the powers seems past praying for. Russis and Germany are urging the Sultan to adopt more vigorous methods of repressions, while the other powers have apparently no advice to offer and content themselves with an attitude of disinterested spectators."

The Athens correspondent of the Times hears that Count Lamsdorf, the Russian foreign minister, has declared his opinion that the Bulgarian bands are guilty of greater tryanny and de-vastation than the Turkish troops and that it would be necessary to warn the Bulgarians that they will not succeed in involving Russia in an armed inter-vention against the Turkish side, and further that Russia will not participate in the creation or appointment of a Christian government.

Three of these were soldiers. Two persons are dead, one of whem is a soldier."

DONDON, Sept. 5.—The special correspondent of the Newcastle Chronicle in Canada, referring to the rapid growth of industries around Niagara, says that for more rapid growth all that is needed is a more rapid influx of capital. English money is borrowed by Americans at a low rate of interest to be invested in Canada to produce a handsome profit.

SHORT AND TO THE POINT.

(London Chronicle).

A Liverpool barrister, now settled in practice in Singapore, has sent to one of the papers a copy of a Chinese agreement of a lease, on which he was called to advise. The translation of the document shows that it has reference to the letting of six houses by Wee Boon Sing to Tek Joom at a rental therein specified. Instead of containing, as a similar English document would contain, a long-winded clause throwing the burden of all extra taxes imposed during the term on the tenant, this agreement concludes:

"Note.—Any increase of assessment made by government it is Tek Joom's lookout, and has nothing to do with Wee Boon Sing." (London Chronicle).

THE BOER AND THE BANK.

THE BOER AND THE BANK.

(M. A. P.)

The story is going the rounds that a typically ignorant and boorish Boer, who has heard of banks, determined to take some of his savings to one of these places. With this object in view he travelled to Cape Town, found a bank, and handed in his cash to the clerk, who in return gave him a bank hook. "How much do you charge for taking care of my money?" asked the Boer. The clerk smilled and said, "We don't charge, but will give you money for taking care of it." "Let me have it back at once," said the Boer. "I always thought you British rascals were dishonest; now I am aure of it."

The Imperial military authorities have put forward for treasury consideration an important proposal for the training of the mounted men of the hand this new branch of military education.

It is considered that the present system of making mounted men is too academic, and, by the very nature of the fenced-in-lands, too artificial for practical cavairy purposes in the field, and it is proposed to sweep away the riding masters of the army.

Artillery and engineers each have technical colleges, and the staff of the army is trained in a university of its own at Camberley.

It is therefore claimed that the art of riding, care of the horse, and reconnatesance should also have a cavalry college.

The existing riding establishments in Kent, and the schools of hygiene and field work at Chatham, Aldershot, Woolwich, and Canterbury would, under the new system, be amalgamated into a common school of equitation, where all that applies to a horse, from its breaking in, would be taught. The trapper's art of seeing without being seen would also be inculcated by those bred from boyhood on wild tracks as hunters.

It is proposed to give the instruction

bred from boyhood on wild tracks as hunters.

It is proposed to give the instruction a realistic value by having the college in a wild part of Ireland or Scotland, where topography, war rides, tracking troops, cavalry factics, swimming rivers, crossing mountains, signalling and shooting from horseback can all be brought into the curriculum under conditions best suited to probable war developments.

The estimated length of the college course to make an officer or man proficient as a cavalryman or scout is ten months to one year, under a staff every member of which would be the best master of his subject obtainable.

It is not proposed to take the cavalry cadet away from Sandhurst, but to receive him after passing there and make him proficient at one finishing establishment in all the mounted subjects.

establishment in all the mounted subjects.

All these proposals have passed through the dire of criticism, from Field Marshal downwards, but it is an expensive proposition, which the treasury will have to carefully consider. The purchase of land and the erection of a building will probably run into five figures; salaries would be four or five thousand a year for the Burnhams and De Wets who are to teach, while the upkeep of horses and maintenance of three or four hundred students are items of consequence.

AN OLD GROCER DEAD

lim Merchints, Passed Away

The scheme, in brief, is the establishment of a university of horeamanship, at which the mounted soldier will be taught that which is second nature to those who live in the open plains of the world.

He will be instructed to rely upon himself, to live and forage and scout alone, to be his own veterinary surgeon, to follow an enemy by tracks, to gauge distance by the dead ashes of a camp fire, to know when the enemy is at a disadvantage, and never to loze him. In short, the scheme is to make De Wets, and, as one cavalry officer puts it, to make them by employing Do Wets as instructors. At present Major Frederick Russell Burnham, the famous acout, will probably take in hand this new branch of military education.

It is considered that the present systems of the scheme is a prominent member of the Waterloo street and has always taken a leading part in church work.

He leaves one daughter, Matilda, residing at home.

The moth is a native of southern countries, but, as in the present case, odd ones are sometimes carried northward by winds.
