AGAINST OSTEOPATHY.

At a meeting of the New Brunswick Medical Council, the practice of osteopathy in this province was discussed and it was decided to get legal opinion on the matter. Five members of this council are nominated by the Medical Society and four by the local government.

This meeting, yesterday, was held in the office of Dr. Skinner, the registrar. Dr. J. P. McInerney, of this city, was elected president of the council. Dr. Gaudet, of Memramouc, lately elected to membership, took his seat for the first time.

SUBURBAN LEAGUE.
The third game of the Suburban League was played last night between Brookville and Robbinston and resulted in a disastrous defeat for the former by the score of 22 to 8.

The games now stand: Renforth won 2, Robbinston 1, Brookville 0.

CITY BORROWS MORE MONEY.

The treasury board debated a long time yesterday over the new loan, but finally decided to call for tenders on a $500,000 four per cent. bond issue.

Jas. I. McAvity was heard and said that his firm expected to spend about $10,000 on a new stove foundry. He asked that the water and school taxes be not increased. He proposed to employ 20 or 25 hands. The building will be situated at the foot of Erin street.

The request was laid over till the next meeting.

The chamberlain presented his monthly report as to the city's finances. The usual notice of 5 per cent. discount on taxes paid before October 1st was moved by Ald. Christie and carried, though the chairman thought 2 1/2 per cent. might be enough and a saving of $9,000 effected.

Ald. Baxter moved the sewerage and water accounts be assessed for the salaries at the ratio of 1 to 10, instead of an even division as heretofore. Carried.

TO COUNT A BILLION DOLLARS.

(Washington Star.)
The great count of cash in the treasury began this afternoon, when the paying tellers of the treasury's office counted up the amount of money on hand, so as to begin business tomorrow morning. Beginning tomorrow a force of 60 treasury employees, most of them experts, will begin an inventory of the $1,123,725 in the 13 cash vaults of the treasury.

The beginning of the new count is the beginning of a new administration as treasurer of the United States. This is the last day in office of Ellis H. Roberts, who has held the treasuryship for eight years and tomorrow morning Morgan H. Treat of New York will take the oath of office as treasurer. He has already qualified in a bond of $150,000, the largest bond given by any official of the United States government except the sub-treasurer at New York, who is compelled to furnish bond in the sum of $400,000. Congress fixed the bonds at different periods and it has never been understood why a larger bond was exacted from the New York sub-treasurer than from the United States treasurer, when the latter is responsible for $1,000,000 more money than the former. The secretary of the treasury gives no bond at all.

The force of treasury employees has been selected and will get speedily to work. The retiring treasurer believes that the count can be completed in three months, although when he came into office the count lasted from July 1 to near the end of February, being the longest on record. Fewer people were engaged in that count, though. The government does not put on any additional employees for this work, merely detailing clerks from different bureaus.

On March 31, 1905, there were 153,181,973 standard silver dollars in four big vaults in the treasury, $915,373.97 of subsidiary silver in four other vaults, $5,260,875.44 in gold coin, $249,930 in gold certificates in two vaults, $535,092.40 in government bonds deposited as security for national bank circulation and for deposits of government money, besides United States notes, silver certificates, national bank notes in process of redemption, etc.

The weight of the coin in the various vaults is about 5,000 tons. Vault No. 1, which contains 110,000,000 of silver dollars, is 89 feet long, 51 feet wide and 12 feet high.

Every dollar, half dollar, quarter, United States note and everything else must be counted.
