JUBILEE SERVICES OF CARLETON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH WERE VERY INTERESTING AND LARGELY ATTENDED

The jubilee services held yesterday in the Carleton Presbyterian church were attended by very large congregations, the seating capacity being taxed to the utmost at all three services. Rev. D. McDermott of Moncton preached in the morning and also in the evening. In the afternoon short addresses were delivered by Rev. A. Gordon Dickie and Rev. David Lang of this city.

Morning Service.
Rev. Mr. McDermott's morning sermon was based on the first part of the forty-seventh chapter of Ezekiel, which tells of the vision of the holy waters which flow from beneath the threshold of the temple, broadened and deepened into a mighty river beautifying and enriching the land through which it flowed.

The preacher, after explaining the passage of Scripture, showed the likeness between the vision of the vision and the Christian church. It was supposed that ancient Jerusalem was supplied with water from a fountain outside the city. So the church was supplied with vitality and life from the secret springs of divine love. The stream which Ezekiel increased from a trickling rivulet to a mighty river. So the church of Christ grew from the twelve followers of a Galilean peasant to embrace all the civilized and advanced nations of the world. The Christian church originated in the son of the Jewish carpenter, a man in one of the humblest walks of life, and the holy waters of Ezekiel's vision sprang from under the threshold of the door. That faith, however, though originating in the life of a peasant, represented itself until it embraced among its followers the most enlightened section of mankind. The beautifying and fertilizing qualities of Ezekiel's river was typical of the influences springing from Christianity. Many persons maintained that the Christian faith possessed its greatest value as a civilizing agent, such was not the case. "Do you," said the preacher, "when you enter this church, value its influence upon yourself on account of the civilizing effect? Is it not rather because your worries are lessened, because your faith is increased that you are able to conquer the trials and vicissitudes of life?"

Afternoon Service.
The afternoon service was presided over by Rev. H. R. Read, pastor of the church. The music was furnished by the choir of St. David's Church. S. J. McGowan sang a solo.

Mr. Read briefly introduced the two speakers of the afternoon. Rev. Mr. Dickie, of St. Stephen's Church, and Rev. Mr. Lang, of St. Andrew's. Speaking of Mr. McDermott, the preacher of the morning, Mr. Read said that when the church was founded this pastor was also pastor of Moncton, and so it was appropriate that the present incumbent of the Moncton pulpit should take part in the jubilee exercises. The founders of the church had been helped by the clergymen of the Presbyterian Church of St. John, and following out the same idea, representatives of the present Presbyterian clergy were aiding in the church's fiftieth anniversary celebration.

Rev. Mr. Lang delivered the first address. His remarks, he said, were intended mainly for the children, and would deal with the future and not with the past. The speaker went on to define the word jubilee. To the ancient Hebrews it denoted a time of joy and forgiveness, a time when old debts were cancelled and slaves freed. Taking the letters of the word jubilee, Mr. Lang used each one as the initial of a word which should apply to everyone on the occasion of a jubilee. Each person should be joyful, as it was a season of happiness. All should be united because each one was dependent on some one else and strength lay in union. Every Christian ought also to be bold, to be eager and ready to face the troubles of the world. Again he should be ingenious or sincere and unselfish. Finally, he should be loyal. Everyone knew what it meant to be loyal to Canada above all other countries and the same feeling should be felt toward church and religion. Lastly, each one should be earnest and enthusiastic, and put all the energy he could muster into the leading of the Christian life.

Rev. Mr. Dickie followed Mr. Lang. The preceding speaker, said Mr. Dickie, had alluded to the church as standing
