How the Apple Got into the Dumpling

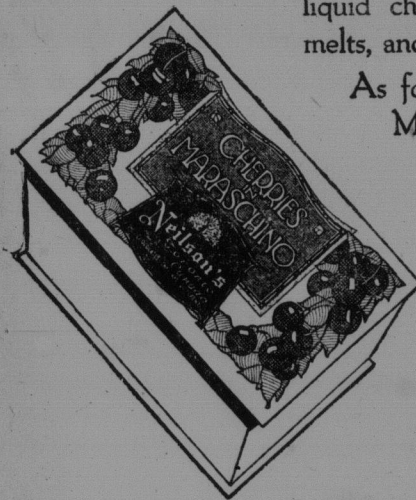

—is a small mystery compared to how the maraschino cherry is made to float inside its chocolate coating

To one who has never seen it done, it may well seem difficult—if not impossible. Let us tell you how we do it.

First of all we make a delicious boiled cream. This is then placed in heated containers to keep it soft. The maraschino cherries are next examined to see that each one is perfect. Then one at a time, the perfect cherries are picked up with a fork, dipped into the cream and laid aside to set.

The second stage takes place in the chocolate dipping room. Here the cream-coated cherry is rolled in warm liquid chocolate. As this cools and sets, the cream melts, and—presto!—the cherry floats.

As for the result—well, you must taste Neilson's Maraschino Cherries—they are more luscious—we were about to say—than mother's apple dumplings.

LEAVES JOURNALISM FOR FINANCE

T. Kelly Dickinson, whose entry into the sphere of investment banking is announced with the formation of the firm of Winens, Dickinson & Whitehead, Limited, is one of the Dominion's ablest, best-informed and most original writers on stock-market and security topics. Coming to Montreal some fifteen years ago as a young newspaper reporter, he secured a position on the Witness, and speedily showed a remarkable gift for the subject of finance. He later became Financial Editor of the Herald, where he had a very free hand and attracted attention by the breezy style, good judgment and ample information of his stock-market comments. But his real achievement came, when along with two or three other newspaper associates, he founded the Financial Times, and in a very short space of time brought it to a leading position among the financial periodicals of the continent. Two features of the paper, namely, "T. K. D.'s Column" and "Hints to Investors," were Mr. Dickinson's special care, and were characterized by the utmost frankness in the commendation of what was good and the denunciation of evil.

A consistent optimist on the future of Canada, Mr. Dickinson as a journalist had no patience with those who would exploit the confidence of the country's friends with ill-judged ventures or purely catch-penny stock-selling devices. In the seven years of his association with the Financial Times, which he recently severed upon selling his stock interest in the paper, he has done more perhaps than any other publicist to maintain a high standard of ethics on Canadian finance and to protect the purchases of Canadian securities from the depredations of sharks and professional exploiters.

ALEXANDRA CURL

The bustling frock, the pandered skirt, and all the pretty frills and furbelows of this winter are to be further enhanced by long curls that will give the modern girl a Dolly Vardou daintiness.

The "Alexandra" curl, which was worn by the Queen-Mother when Princess of Wales, is returning to popular favour.

Bond-street is full of these long ringlets, and every hairdresser is confident that the fad of fifty years ago is to return in full force this season.

"Here is a beauty," said a Bond-street coiffeur, holding out a magnificent auburn ringlet admirably "Think how pretty a red haired girl, with a green dance frock, would look with this curl falling over her white shoulder.

The curls are worn attached to the back hair and drawn round the left of the neck. They are becoming to fresh young faces, and for evening wear. Some women with plenty of their own hair will make up ringlets, but most will probably prefer to save themselves time and trouble by pinning on curls ready made.

Well! If That Isn't the Dandiest Present--Just What I Wanted

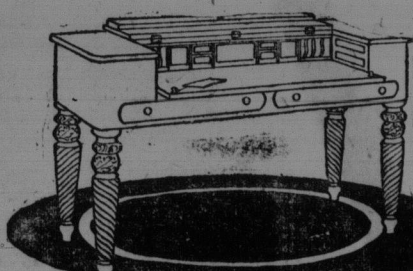

I had a hunch that dad was going to get me something pretty nice, but I never DREAMED that it would be one of those dandy Writing Desks that I saw the other day at Everett's.

Dear old dad couldn't have gotten me anything that I needed more than this—and such a match for my room, too.

Never again will I let my correspondence accumulate—with this excuse for keeping up with it.

This store is filled with the practical in gift things, and will be glad to show you at any time its extensive line. Things that will make the lasting impression on the recipient and stand a perpetual monument to your affection.

A veritable wonderland of children's things, too!
