Previously, students were required to accept a partial loan of $2900 before being considered for a bursary ($2300). The rest of the loan would be granted if a financial need still existed.

The outcome of political pressure from the opposition parties on the Dalhousie Board of Governors and the provincial government could be instrumental in swaying the balance in favour of a provincially regulated tuition system.

This would take the decision-making out of the hands of all BoGs in the province.

"Sometimes all they (BoG) see is the bottom line," said Scott McCrossin, chair of the Students' Union of Nova Scotia.

"(With a tuition increase) there will still be students, but the BoG doesn't care if they are only rich students," he said.

The Board will strike committees in January giving students the opportunity to voice their concerns.

A final decision on the tuition rates for the 1992/93 academic year will be made at the BoG meeting in January.
