The proprietors of the Quebec Directory now place before the public the first edition of a work which they hope to re-issue annually. In so doing, they desire to state that they have taken every means to obtain correct and complete information, that the names of the inhabitants have been carefully obtained from house to house, and that they have used every diligence to avoid those typographical errors which so often disfigure works of this nature and mislead those who refer to them.

The arrangement of the work is strictly alphabetical, as regards the names, to avoid inconvenience in reference. The table of contents shows generally the information contained in the book, while the miscellaneous index which follows shows
