

prise to the venerable officials on whom devolved the responsibility of regulating the conference arrangements. The evening of Saturday was devoted to the work of Young Men's Christian Associations. The rooms had been placed at the disposal of the conference; and contributed greatly to its comfort and success. It was fitting that to an institution, which combines in itself all that is noblest and best in evangelical alliance, some suitable and sufficient recognition should be accorded.

THE EVENING MEETINGS
On the Sunday evening were held in Cooper Institute, Newbury Hall, in the far-famed Tammany Hall, opened probably for the first time for Protestant religious service, and the spacious Academy of Music. These large buildings were thronged to overflowing, and yet it is estimated that though the audience in the aggregate must have amounted to nearly twenty thousand people, probably as many more were left in the street. At the meeting in the Academy Hall, the Mayor of New York, Havermeyer, presided, assisted by Chancellor Crosby. After several addresses had been delivered, the most touching being that of Professor Christlieb, who directed the thoughts of the great congregation from the men who had stood so prominently before them, to Jesus only, a farewell address, painfully elaborated and ponderous in phraseology was read by Dr. Schenck, an Episcopal rector of Brooklyn. A farewell hymn composed for the occasion, by the Rev. Mr. Gause, was sung at the close. It was exceedingly appropriate, and yet as I looked at the vast concourse, gallery rising above gallery, my thoughts were involuntarily taken up with the lines of Alfred, chanted by him at his farewell service in Canterbury cathedral, quoted by Dr. Adams with great effect at the reception service, and still, as some strain of music lingering in the ear:

"Ten thousand times ten thousand,
In sparkling raiment bright,
The armies of the ransomed saints,
Throng up the steps of light."

"The finished—all is finished,
Their fight with death is o'er;
Flung open wide the golden gates,
And let the victors in."

"O then what raptures greetings,
On Canaan's happy shore,
What knighting sermons, friendships up,
Where partings are no more."

"So it is," said the venerable speaker in one of the most eloquent addresses of the conference: "that our hopes of heaven enter into the welcome we give you; and so did the same blessed, three-hundreded hosts of heaven enter into the farewell uttered in the name of the Lord Jesus and of the Christian brotherhood."

Noteworthy amongst the incidents of the Alliance were the letter from PERE HYACINTHE who had been invited and hoped at the time to have been present at the conference in New York. He longed not only for evangelical alliance, but for the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, on the common ground of the different Christian confessions, but for an organic and vital unity. From the third catholic congress, which only a few weeks since closed its sessions at Constance, where four hundred and twenty council was held, in which the forerunner of Protestantism, John Hess, was committed to the flames, came

THE GREETINGS OF THE OLD CATHOLICS to the international conference of the Evangelical Alliance. This remarkable document closed with the wish that an active close joining between members of the evangelical church might be accomplished, that between themselves, the old Catholics of Germany, and the various branches of the Protestant church, the band of mutual love might be drawn closer and closer, that cords might be needed by the evangelists of the future, the Lord Jesus, the members of the church might form but one single flock.

THE BROOKLYN WELCOME
of the Alliance was a most splendid one. After dinner and pleasant promenade, in which opportunity was afforded for the exchange of pleasant introduction, some of which will pass into treasured remembrance; the delegates were admitted by side doors to the stage, when a gratifying scene met the eye. Orchestra, family circles, auditorium and galleries were crowded to their utmost. The stage of night was adorned by the evangelists of the metropolitan and catholic character of the meeting. Not only the star-spangled banner of America, the emblem of God's glorious work in creation, and the red cross of England, emblem of God's redemptive work in redemption, but there were interwoven with these flags of Germany, Italy, France, the ensigns of Japan and China—in all the symbols of twenty-one nations. The chairman of the meeting, the Rev. Dr. Stoen, gave an opening address of great interest. In appropriate illustration, exquisite beauty and classic purity of diction, the most graceful modulation of accent, the Brooklyn Congregationalist minister is not surpassed by any member of the conference. The speech of the evening so far as popularity was concerned, was unquestionably that of Henry Ward Beecher; no where probably is he more popular than at home in Brooklyn. It has been said that society in the United States must be divided into three parts: good, bad and Beechers. One cannot be surprised that Ward Beecher, after his Sinkspeak in his many-sidedness, his fullness and richness of resources, his beautiful play of fancy, naturalness of thought and expression, and in the touch of nature, that in so many ways, Scotland, the language and the literature of the American people. The Dominion of Canada was represented at Brooklyn by the eloquent pastor of St. Matthew's, Rev. G. M. Grant, who in a few closely condensed sentences told of the magnitude of the new nation—reaching from ocean to ocean with the avere borealis for its northern boundary—with an area surpassing that of the United States. The statements were no doubt as new as they were astounding to many in the audience. The addresses of Dr. John H. Stoen, and of the Rev. Mr. N. B. Stoen, were able and appropriate. One capital point made by Dr. Hall was that the Alliance was not held together by negative but by positive—they might call them dogmas if they liked. The applause with which this utterance was received was sufficient evidence that while the genius of Mr. Beecher was admired, his attempt, plausible but fallacious and unscriptural, to raise a fabric without a foundation in sound doctrine, had carried too covetous to the mind of the assembled multitude. Another brilliant sentence was in regard to Romanism. Rome was never truer in talking concerning her own unity in contrast with Protestant discord. In the Greenwood cemetery they had seen beautifully trimmed trees. The unity was produced on the principle that when a branch grew out it was clipped off; and they had seen the magnificent trees and no common man can hold that doctrine.

which God in nature had given them. The dead uniformity of the clipped trees was Romanism, and the trees of God's planting, having diversity in unity, were Protestantism.

On Monday morning the delegates assembled at the Jersey Station, where a train with Pullman cars was waiting to take them to Philadelphia. From this point we were in charge of George H. Stuart, of Philadelphia, one of the most distinguished men on this continent. To him more than to any other man we were indebted for the magnificent hospitalities every where enjoyed—at least he gave direction to the spontaneous generosity of the American cities, which from first to last, in the case of individuals and of great corporations, was exhibited on a scale which probably could not be attained in any other country—not in England because the higher classes are not largely in active sympathy with the Alliance. On the way to Philadelphia, we were turned off on a side track to quaint quiet Princeton, where though there are no sidewalks, we were paraded in procession and marched through the most beautiful and stately city to the church, in which addresses were delivered, the best of all by Dr. Hugg, who paid a graceful tribute to the great theologian, Dr. Hodge, and to Dr. McCosh, who in the old world had a great name in that high sphere of philosophy thought in which great names were most needed. We visited the Green library, Dickinson Hall, and other college buildings; stopping for a moment by the President's house in which Witherspoon lived, and in which President Edwards died. From some statements made by President McCosh, I understood that free will offerings to the amount of a million dollars had been presented to Princeton. The principal buildings were all monuments of princely liberality. The theological seminary at Princeton is an honor to the name of the Prophets for the Presbyterian Church; but the college or chartered university is not connected with church or state, at least nominally, but virtually it must be judged a Presbyterian institution. Dr. McCosh stated that on an average as often as twice in four years there had been several religious revivals. At four o'clock the special train, with some three hundred delegates, reached the depot at Philadelphia. In some sixty or more carriages, they were conveyed through the principal streets of the city to

INDEPENDENCE HALL.
The old State House in which the Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776, with paintings of the founders of the Republic, furniture and other articles preserved as memorials of that memorable period, in which event more than any other the Anglo-Saxon race owes its greatness. Many spots of classic and consecrated interest I have visited in the old land; but none of them ever inspired a purer pride of race and grand ancestral achievement than did that antiquated hall in the city of brotherly love.

What Rannymede and the Long Parliament are in English history—the old State House is to the American people. From Independence Hall the guests were conveyed to the Continental Hotel, where were a splendid entertainment, the most magnificent parties for attending the conference—three of which were held that evening. The Rev. Mr. Johnson, of Hamilton and myself were asked to represent Canada, but we both excused duty—the one crowded out and the other being up at the wrong meeting. The Continental Hotel was richly and beautifully decorated for the occasion. On the stage above and on either side was a profusion of rare and rich tropical plants. In front of the gallery were the words, "The Church of Philadelphia, October 1st, 1873." Under the white flowers the name of Wickliffe. On the walls were the names of illustrious reformers and evangelists, Wesley, Luther, Knox, Zwingle, Calvin and Huss; and elegantly interspersed were the flags of nations represented by the delegates. H. Stuart occupied the chair. The citizens welcome was given by ex-Governor Pollock, and that of the ministers and churches of Philadelphia by Bishop Simpson.

Arriving at the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad a little before three in the afternoon, coaches were in attendance to convey the delegates to Willard's Hotel, where by Dr. Tiffany, the Methodist minister of the Metropolitan church, in behalf of the Metropolitan branch of the Alliance they were presented to Governor Sheppard, who tendered to them, in the most generous and cordial manner, the use of the White House, which some of us had been curious to see, and which the way looks very much like the residence of a retired country gentleman, and in what is called the Blue Room, were introduced to the PRESENCE OF THE UNITED STATES.

The introduction of the members of the Alliance, each foreign delegate having as a badge of distinction, a blue ribbon, was done in a graceful manner by Rev. Dr. Tiffany, and a response came in the form of the briefest of speeches: "It affords me great pleasure to welcome to the capital of this nation the Evangelical Alliance, the freest country in which to work out the problem of your association."

Well that speech will be remembered by some of us, when many brilliant orators have preceded it. The appearance of General Grant impressed me very profoundly. Before the introduction of the delegation the President was seated in the East Room. Around the President were distinguished men from many countries. The occasion was one of great importance, but not a minute in the great hall of the interval. Calm and impressive as the sculptured marble: there was the man to fight it out along that line though the President was a little weary and yet the firmness of expression there was a winning gentleness and a modesty of demeanor extremely captivating. The courtesy of General Grant was the more to be appreciated, as he had put off, to the last possible moment, an engagement to meet his companions-in-arms, in order to welcome the delegation to Washington. Three meetings were held in the evening.

METHODIST METROPOLITAN CHURCH.
This noble church with its imposing architectural proportions, lofty spire, complete dome of bells giving out its melody in honor of the occasion, is quite an institution in Washington. The interior arrangements are in beautiful harmony with the style and magnificence of the exterior. The ceiling, arched and groined, is grand and graceful in sweep and curve. The windows, if I am not mistaken, are on either side of the dome filled up with the Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments. conspicuous from its dark appearance and Hebrew inscription, the point of the arch which forms the recess or chancel is a stone from the Temple of Solomon. The communion table is inlaid with wood from Mount Olivet. Of the Metropolitan Church, President Grant is a trustee, and so also I believe was the late Chief Justice Chase. A pew is set apart for every State in the Union.

PUBLIC MEETINGS, to hear the Alliance Delegates, will be held to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, in St. Matthew's Church, and Thursday, in Brunswick Street Church.
THE favours of our good correspondents have compelled us to abbreviate our condensed news this week. But our readers with ourselves will be grateful for so comprehensive and spirited a representation of talent from various quarters.
We hope the canvas for new subscribers is going forward. The great necessity for it we will explain more fully next week. FROM THIS DATE WE WILL SEND THE WEEKLY NEWS TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS TILL FIRST JAN. 1875 FOR $2.00.
SOCIETY TICKETS have been sent to Sackville for surrounding circuits; as also to Gayboro'. Ministers who require these early will not miss them. With most they ought to be in good time for two or three months yet.

Rev. Mr. PHELPS has been sent to Ingouph as a branch of the New England Circuit. He reports a prospect even better than might have been anticipated. Our readers will not fail to note these openings, especially in connection with others reported by New England letters.

MOTHERS, MOTHERS, MOTHERS.
Don't fail to procure Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP for your children. It is the best remedy for all the ailments of childhood, such as colic, worms, teething, and all the other troubles which afflict the young. It is a most valuable and reliable remedy, and is sold by all druggists.
The cold and stormy weather of autumn generally brings diseases, such as coughs, colds, diseases of the throat, asthma, rheumatism, neuralgia and other pains, which should receive prompt attention to prevent their becoming settled. For this purpose, nothing equals Graham's Pain Expeller, it is so efficacious in many of the "ills that flesh is heir to," every family should have a bottle in the house. It costs but 25 cents.
