Sugar declined 15c per hundred and is in light demand, but the coming of the fruit preserving season is expected to have a stimulating effect on mand. Much depends on the quantity of strayberries marketed. Reports are conflicting as to the probable production of berries. As yet they have not been reaching the market in large quantities.

Advances were recorded in salad dressing, ice cream salt, soap chips, jams, maple syrup, black pepper. Old potatoes are nearly cleaned out and new Southern potatoes are now taking their place, prices having de-clined in the latter during the week. Lettuce and radishes are slow sellers owing to the backyard production which is getting under way. Cana-dian cabbage and beets are now reaching the market. Georgia peaches put in an appearance, being the first of the season. Business is still

Then she accidentally comes on Agie May (Alice Hollister), a woman of the streets, who tells her Doctor. Keith gave her his picture for her locket. Grace misunderstands, and coming again on the Doctor with Agig in his arms, whom he is trying to comfort against a fear of Dopey (Armand Cortez), a denizen of the slums, who threatens to "get her" if she tries to reform, she tries to forget Keith. The climax arranges for Grace to see Aggie kill herself, which is such a shock Grace is under care of physicians for weeks. During this period Doctor Keith is tried and about to be convicted of Aggies murder, when Grace learns of the trial and races in an automobile to the court-room just in time to prevent a verdict of "guilty" and secure a new trial, which, of course, results in clearing the Doctor. This picture will be seen at the Brant the first of next week.

The leading character of "The Good Bad Man" is an eccentric outlaw who calls himself "Passin' Through." All that is known of him is that he is a most cheerful young man, always smiling, and gullty of some extraordinary offenses against law and order. One of them is the holding-up of the Pacific Express for the sole purpose of robbing the conductor of his ticket punch.

But another crime, which is more

"Passin' Through" aims above all else, to be of assistance to illegitimate children who are compelled to fight their way alone in the world. He robs society to give to society's outcasts; that is all. The reason is that he believes himself to be an illegitimate child. He knew his mother, who died when he was very legitimate child. He knew his mother, who died when he was very young; but she never spoke to him of his father. And as she was go very unhappy and so destitute, he concluded his governor must have been a scoundrel.

mary Doone lives in the White-chapel district of London. Ever since she can remember she has been there among the slums drudging out a slow existence. It is therefore with a vague feeling of being lost that she finally leaves the district, pursued by the drunken fury of the man (Walter Law) who had raised her as his child.

The story calls for a terrific struggle between Mr. Barrymore, as Bennington, and H. S. Northrup, as Glendon, during which the telephone is overturned and the receiver dislodged from the hook. It is when the operator at "Central" gets the "open signal" that she turns in an alarm to the police headquarters giving the address at which there is trouble on the line.
