S. STEPHENSON, Proprietor.

NO BAR'L THIS TIME.

Previous to Saturday, Kent Liberals freely confessed that without Mr. George Stephens as a candidate they could not win. It was Stephens or disaster with them. Mr. Stephens hesitated long but finally allowed himself to be seduced into accepting the nomination. The Liberals place their trust in Mr. Stephens' bar'l.—Ridgetown Dominion.

own Dominion. This is doing Mr. Stephens and the Liberals of Kent an injustice. It is said this kind of thing prevailed in the past. It will not prevail this time. In the first place Mr. Stephens has pledged-himself to conduct an honorable election. He has hitherto been a man of his word, and we don't think politics will corrupt him so quickly as to break it in this.

Next, the election law has been changed. Neither those who arranged for the putting out of money before nor those who actually put it out will care to do so any more. It means jail without any alternative, and an election trial is not necessary to punish the guilty. They can be arrested under an ordinary warrant. As bribery has been made a felony it will be unwise even to conspire to commit it. Then, again, the man who takes a bribe renders himself liable to six months' imprisonment, the same as the briber. No, No, there will be no bribery this time. The law makes it unhealthy.

A METHODIST APPEAL.

The Coming Elections and the Liquor Traffic is the title of an appeal to "the Methodist people of the Province of Ontario," signed by Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist Church, Revs. Dr, D. L. Brethour and William Kettlewell. The appeals is to the ministers, friends and adherents of the Methodist church, 'citizens of our common country, rejoicing in its welfare and having political influence and votes that can be used for its weal or woe," and "made in view of the coming Dominion elections, . . . to consider most seriously their duty to God, to their country and to the race," The appeal to such is made "to take a deep and fervid interest in the elections and their results, . . . . have men nominated and elected to parliament who will represent the best sentiments of our country on the prohibition of the liquor traffic; and who will be ture to the temperance reform . . . to combine among themselves and to unite with other voters to defeat the men that have failed to promote the prohibition

Continuing, the appeal says: "Good men and true of all political parties . believe that it is the immediate duty of the government to grapple with the monster evil;" recites the deliverence of the general conference of the Methodist church, "that the traffic in intoxicating liquors is im moral, and it is the duty of the civil government to prohibit it;" and, finally endorses the attitude of the Dominion alliance.

It will be seen that this appeal of the standing committee on temperance, prohibition and moral reform (Ontario section) to members and adherents of the Methodist church realizes that the prohibitionists have a dress the wrong done to them. It was to a de egation of the London conference, sitting in Stratford, that Sir Wilfrid gave such assurances, that he would, if successful in the then pending elections, provide a plebiscite and obey the people's mandate, asled many Methodists to support his candidates in 1896 in the full confid dence that he would grant the plebiscite and, if a majority favored prohibition, enact that measure. membering this pledge to a Methodist conference delegation and th sequel, it is only natural that the standing committee on temperance should issue an appeal invoking Methodist electors to use their ballots as to secure a nedress of the gross fraud practice! upon them.

While inviting punishment upon those who have not responded to the demand of the plebiscite, the appeal recognizes the grave responsibility of the administration. It says distinctly, "Good men and true . . believe it is the duty of the government to grapple with this monster evil."

How far the government, elected because of its fair promises to the prohibitionists, has undertaken to grapple with the monstrous evil need not be told. The truth is known in every hamlet of the Dominion that once in power by grace of the votes of prohibitionists the government sold out to the liquor party and before even submitting the plebiscite made a secret compact, that it should be null and void, by requiring the impossible condition that it must receive a majority vote of the registered electors to be followed by legislation granting pro-

If the Methodists and other prohibitionists do their duty to themselves, not to say country, they will see that the votes cast for Sir Wilfrid because of his deceitful promises to them are this season cast against him and his

MAMMOTH LOCOMOTIVES.

An Illinois Central locomotive that recently came from the shops was, says the Chicago Times-Herald, when it first touched the rails, the biggest locomotive in the world. But so rapid has been the increase in size of these mechanisms that there is now at least one, if not others, larger. Still, so far as bigness is concerned, this monster will serve as a capital illustration of what the skilled mechanics of to-day can do. The mathematics of this locomotive are: Cylinders, 23 inches by 30 inches stroke; the drivers are 57 inches, or nearly 5 feet in diameter; the boiler front end is 82 inches in diameter; the weight on the drivers is 193,200 pounds, on the trucks 39,000 pounds, total engine weight 232,200 pounds; the tender load in 132,700 pounds; the total weight of the engine and tender is 364,900 pounds; and the net hauling capacity on the level is 6,717 tons. This locomotive will Let us not forget their valor; easily haul sixty cars under ordinary conditions and sixty-five or more under extraordinary conditions. The Pittsburg, Bessemer and Lake Erie road has recently secured two larger engines of the same consolidation type. They have a total weight of engine and tender of 391,400 pounds, or a weight on drivers of 225,200 pounds and on truck wheels 25,100 pounds, or total engine weight of 250,300 pounds; the cylinders are 24 inches in diameter and the piston stroke 32 inches; the diameter of the drivers is 54 inches; the working pressure of the boilers is 220 pounds; the fire-box has a length of 132 inches, a width of grievance and propose to take steps to 40 14 inches. These locomotives will be used in ore and iron traffic, their. duty being to haul great train loads at moderate speed.

> John Carriere, writing in the Paris Le Matin, supplies this bit of good humor: "I must admit that English officers are gentlemen, who show no bitterness of feeling, and who are full of humor. On my asking one of them when the mail train would leave, he laughingly replied: 'That depends on the general traffic manager, Christian De Wet!"

> Julius Schriver, M. P., for Huntington, and for many years chairman of the Liberal caucus at Ottawa, is the latest of the old Liberals to decline renomination. The Gleaner, Mr. Schriver's organ, in speaking of his retireemnt says: "It is no secret that he deplored the course of the present

AN OMAHA POKER STORY

Thought the Players Were Short of Cash the Beting Was Very Lively.

The story of the big poker game played on a train between Chicago and New York, and concluded in Gotham, was a good one. It was a big game, too, but it was not a marker to one played in Omaha a few days ago. The men engaged in the Chicago-New York game had money to cremate, while the parties in the Cmaha game were rather short on cash. However, the lack of cash aid not prevent some lively betting, and there are several husbands who are wondering where eriain articles of jeweiry have gone.

The game in question was played in a private house, and the particita were seven married women. It was a small game to start with-1 cent ante and 10 cents limit-but as is often the case the timit was raised and the fun increased. Mrs. Bjones picked up a set of threes and as she moved her ante to the centra she remarked that she never did like these little ante

Mrs Kersmythe smiled as she "skinned the cards" and observed that she held aces up, and remarked that nothing would please her more than to take the roof off.

"Well, I am not much of a sport," said Mrs. McMac, "but I am ready to make the game a little stiffer." Other participants were of the same opinion, so the limit was taken off and the real fun began. It was a case of bluff, raise, come again and raise some more, and when the supply of cash gave out little articles of jewelry began to appear on the table. The trouble culminated with a jack pot It was opened with a pair of kings, and everybody stayed. The opener shoved five pennies a dime, a hat pin and a silver glove buttoner to the centre. The next player raised with a quarter, a brooch and an exchange check having 17 cents yet due thereon. The third player saw by shoving in a quarter, a silver friendship heart and a package of sen sen. The fourth studied her hand for several moments and then bet an empty but silver mounted purse. The fifth player came in with a pair of silver mounted side combs, the sixth with the gold chain that anchored her eyeglasses, and the seventh ended it all with a turquoise

No. Six won the pot with three tens. She insisted that her gold chain was She insisted that her gold chain was worth $3, and that every player must give her $3 in cash to redeem her jeweiry. This is disputed by others, who insist that they had no intention of betting so high. But No. 6 holds on to the stuff and will not let go until she gets the three plunks, and the others say she is a real mean thing and a "poker sharp." The game has and a "poker sharp." The game has
