THE SECTIONAL CRY.

from the organ, Sir Richard has discovered that it is in order to raise the sectional alarm. Unfortunately as usual, he manages to select the worst possible time for doing it. His leader has commenced his martial progress, or rather parade—for he refuses to encounter a foe—in the Maritime Provinces. Down there they are somewhat jealous of Ontario, and nothing will irritate of the content of th time Provinces. Down there they are somewhat jealous of Ontario, and nothing will irritate them more than a perusal of this Cobourg deliverance. It seems to be the fate of the Op. position to set the different members of the Confederation members of the Confederation by the ears, and certainly if its leaders think they can make anything by so dishonourable a game, by all means let them

The only one we can give, however, is that the temptation is too strong for us. There is an em.. barras derichesses in the gallant knight's speeches to which no amount of patient attention can amount of patient attention can do justice. He touches all subjects, and impartiality muddles of that tribunal. A court of landlords, however liberal, would destroy public confidence in the Bill, while on the other hand if the extraordinary powers created by the Bill should be placed in the hands of men notorious for their leanings toward the popular side, the landlords would at once set themselves to defeat the measure and that when his pretentious veracity was put to the test of an oath, he vehement ently shirked a too, too trying or deal—a little grain of conscience made him cautious. There's Laurier, that's for intellect and originality and success as a Minister! The people of the Lower Provinces will remember that this namby-pamby young statesman was the most conscious fortune.
