In view of the new arrival at the White House...

Some idea of how low our "reform" comes...

September 1, 1893, will live as a memorable date...

The temperance people of the city met Monday night...

Dalton McCarthy is now on the broad Atlantic on his way to Canada...

Canadians can well congratulate themselves during these stirring times...

The statement of the finance department showing the revenue and expenditure...

We doubt very much if the Irish National League of America ever issued the manifesto...

The Dominion Government desires much praise in sending Assistant Commissioner Chapais to this Province...

Canada's new Governor-General is expected to arrive in a few days...

Emperor William adopted a peculiar way of recalling France to the humiliating position...

Our "reform" council has been at it again. This body can never be properly termed "reform" until Premier Peters takes a hand at its reformation...

This influx of people into Canada is not a new thing, or the great press will be minus one of its strongest evidences...

The Patriot is furious because Mr. Blake has seen fit to canvass the Third District. We know the organ of good government is actuated by the noblest motives...

Literature is to be enriched by the publication of the works of one whose name is very rarely associated with those who invoke the Muse...

Canadians can well congratulate themselves during these stirring times of financial depression, socialistic upheavals and idle workmen...

When grave international disputes, requiring much ability and tact in their solution, are brought to a peaceful termination by means of arbitration...

The Examiner seems to think that Home Rule has a pretty hard row to travel. After reading over some of our contemporary ideas on the question...

It thinks "that the chances seem to be against Home Rule," and that its "success will depend mainly upon the ability of a man who is only thirty-five years of age."

It is a question of terms more or less. The hull was as tight as a cork and free from water. When the hatches were opened and the skulls met the water, it was a most curious sight...

China's Pirates. A despatch from Victoria, B. C., dated the 17th inst., states that the coast of Aden has been haunted by a band of native pirates...

who had escaped the murderous assault of the pirates and were afraid of being left behind, rushed into it, causing the boat to sink...

The judiciary of the Province must certainly have jarring a cog, or else why all this stirring and confusion of ideas. The present Dominion Criminal Code enacted that twenty-four hours after a prisoner has been committed for trial...

An abandoned Austrian barque, named the Vila, was sighted at sea Wednesday last by Capt. Nelson, of the steamship Breidablik. He sent a prize crew of four men aboard and towed the ship into New York.

The fate of the Vila's crew, including her skipper, Capt. George Stano, may never be known. They left the ship when nobody knew. The crew went ashore and the ship was towed to New York.

When grave international disputes, requiring much ability and tact in their solution, are brought to a peaceful termination by means of arbitration, it is customary to bestow some reward upon those members of the tribunal whose labors tended to more easily and speedily bring about a settlement.

The hull was as tight as a cork and free from water. When the hatches were opened and the skulls met the water, it was a most curious sight. The water was so hot that it was necessary to use a special apparatus to cool it.

China's Pirates. A despatch from Victoria, B. C., dated the 17th inst., states that the coast of Aden has been haunted by a band of native pirates. The pirates were seen to be carrying off a large number of Chinese.
