He conceived it possible that a majority of the people might vote for prohiition and yet parliament might be op posed to the measure. After the vote was taken in the country it would be not wholly the responsibility of the government, but of parliament to deal t was right to inform the people before going to the expense of the plebiscite, whether the government intended to take action on it. The people of Nova Scotis had already voted on one plebiscite and they ought to know what the result would be in case the people voted for prohibition. The premier had said that the question of compensation and of constitutional power would have to be settled in case the vote went in the negative. It seemed to him that these

Sir Richard Cartwright's visit to Washington along with his secretary before the opening of the session cost $443 and the visit of Sir Louis Davies to England in connec-tion with the fisheries case and the arreaties in their application to Canada OUT along with his secretary, cost $1,670.

The house being in supply Friday, Mr. Davin took exception to the item for the Edmonton bridge, concerning which there appears to have been some crooked work. Mr. Davin's charge is that the contractors were allowed substitute cement for masonry and were also allowed concessions which bridge discussion was continued to a late tour. Mr. Davin showed that only nineteen days was allowed to easern tenderers to inquire into this contract in Alberta; that after the contract was let the minister within twelve days got a report all the way from Edonton that there was no stone either was permitted to substitute concrete, which cost twice as much. Hon. Mr. Foster contended that Mr. Tarte ought charges, which were serious, considering that the whole work would cost the country some $75,000. Hon. Mr. Tarte got much excited, declaring that he had followed the reports of his own officers. He declared that if this style of criticism and these restrictions were continued he would not stand it any longer. So far as could be gathered from Mr. Tarte's vague threats, he was late government on the public works staff unless the opposition ceased their criticisms. Mr. McLellan of Calgary who has been one of the leading conractors in Canada, showed that conrete would not cost more than two thirds as much as stone and not much more than half the price set forth by Mr. Tarte. At midnight Hon. Mr. Foster replied to Mr. Tarte's threat by saying that if the government was mean enough to punish employes for the criticism of the opposition he would regret it.
