The Indian newspapers have been urging Kitchener's appointment.

One is dead, another will die, and a third will be killed for life. The others injured will recover. Another accident by dynamite occurred at Stratford, Vermont, on Friday. It appears that someone attempted to throw out some frozen dynamite in a stove, and the result was a terrific explosion, which caused the loss of one life, the serious injury of a little girl, and the wrecking of a small house.

"The Resurrection" was the theme of Rev. Father Campbell's discourse in St. Dunstan's Cathedral on Sunday evening last. It was a great historic fact that the Rev. preacher treated the subject. His text was from the words of St. Paul: "If Christ had not risen our faith would be vain." The Rev. preacher first vividly described to his hearers the place and time of our Lord's crucifixion. Calvary stands on a short distance west of Jerusalem, and opposite to it, on the east side of the city is situated Mount Olivet. Between the city and Olivet runs the brook of Cedron, and between the city and Mount Olivet is the Garden of Gethsemane. As the time of the crucifixion the sun was sinking behind Calvary enveloping it in dark shadows, while the reflected rays threw a flood of light around Mount Olivet. In the crucifixion, the Rev. preacher pointed out, was epitomized the life of Christ as well as Christianity itself. The earthquake that followed the crucifixion, and the other convulsions of nature were attested by the historians of the time, there can be no question about them. The Jews went to Pilate and begged of him a guard of soldiers to watch the tomb of Christ, Pilate asked them to guard the tomb as they would, as they had soldiers at their command. When our Lord rose from the tomb, these soldiers who were on guard were struck dumb; then the Jews asked them to say they were asleep, and the disciples stole away the body. When the apostles came to the tomb on Sunday morning, it was empty and as angels' breath in smiling garments told them He was gone and to go to Jerusalem and they would meet Him. St. Augustine, the Rev. preacher pointed out, confounded those who would shelter themselves behind the excuse that the soldiers were asleep, by asking them, are sleeping guards well adapted for keeping watch, and if asleep how did they know the disciples took the body? There are those in our day who would like to get rid of our Lord's resurrection, either on the plea of the sleeping guards, or by denying that he was crucified at all. But the evidence of history is too strong against them. It is the duty of all good Christians to glory in the resurrection and to avail themselves of the privileges thereby purchased for us.

THE WAR!

The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, March 28th: "General Clements occupied Fauresmith to-day, without opposition. A nine pounder gun and maxim and large quantities of ammunition were discovered hidden in a mine. Col. Plober, on leaving Ladybrand on the 26th, was attacked, losing one wounded and five missing. During a skirmish north of the Modder on the 22nd, five men were wounded and Capt. Sloane Stanley of the 16th Lancers and five men of the regiment were taken prisoners.

A London despatch of the 30th ult. says: The Queen has telegraphed Lord Roberts to convey her sympathy to the widow of General Joubert and tell her the Britons regarded her husband as a gallant soldier and an honorable foe. Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, who served in the Transvaal war, also requested Lord Roberts to convey his sympathy.

The announcement of General Joubert's death from pneumonia is a military event of the first importance. This announcement, it is thought, will mark the beginning of the end of the Dutch resistance. He possessed not only military talent, but also real authority over the Dutch commandos, and his capture would have been a serious blow to the Boers for a final stand against Roberts. Joubert had been hampered in Natal by other commanders who were free to express their opinions in councils of war, and even to upset his plans, but his plan of defence had been adopted, and the Boers and Free State soldiers had confidence in him. Joubert would have been a woman worthy of Roberts' steel. His death will deprive the Boers of the only leader really competent to direct the defence of their country. All references in the English press to Joubert are kind and appreciative. He and Chief Justice Horne have been regarded as South African leaders of nobility of character, whose minds were not perverted by ambition and selfishness. General Petrus Jacobus Joubert, Commandant General of the Transvaal force, was born about sixty-eight years ago. He was a descendant of the old French Huguenot family which settled in South Africa. He was born in Cape Colony, but was taken by his parents to the Orange Free State where he was taught from early childhood to shoot straight and hate the British. Of schooling he had but little, but his ambition prompted him to read the few books he could obtain, and he succeeded in obtaining a fair knowledge of history and languages. Soon after the acquisition of Natal by the British he became a hanger of the South African republic and a daring fighter. He was so feared by the natives that the knowledge that he was at the head of a punitive expedition usually resulted in their surrender. He was elected vice-president of the Transvaal in 1896, defeated Sir George Colley at Majuba Hill in 1881, and acted as President of the republic in 1893-94 during Kruger's absence in Europe. General Joubert was always in favor of the use of force instead of diplomacy, and President Kruger on several occasions had great difficulty in representing his hot-headed friend and colleague, notably in 1879, when Joubert, with Kruger and Pretorius, was planning the rebellion to overthrow British rule in the Transvaal. In connection with the death of Commander Joubert it is interesting to recall that the Boer Commander-in-chief visited Canada in the fall of 1893. He was lavishly entertained at Montreal and Quebec, as well as at Winnipeg and other Canadian cities by well known representative people. While in Montreal he was the guest of Mrs. James Brown, cousin of the wife of Mr. Clark, the English M. P., who has for years been agent of the Transvaal government at London.

A despatch of the 31st ult., from London says: President Kruger has apparently made up his mind not to wait until the British are ready to advance. Therefore, resuming hostilities, he sent a force of Boers to Kaasre siding, fourteen miles south of Brantford and only twenty-one miles from Bloemfontein. "They entrenched themselves there on three kopjes, but Roberts despatched an overwhelling force against them which drove them back to Brantford. The British loss was one killed and one hundred wounded. Indications are not wanting that Kruger intends to make some attempt to support his threat to retake Bloemfontein. In Natal as well as in the Free State clashes of outposts, which are always frequent, are beginning. Reports from Boer headquarters state that the British troops are massing at Blandelslaagte and that Colonel Botha with his mounted infantry, has been busy in the neighborhood of Helpmakaar further to the east. The Boers are showing signs of acting on the offensive once again. In order to check this disposition, General Buller has had to strengthen his outposts. Skirmishing continues at Warrenton. The situation there suggests that a game of bluff is being played by the British with the idea of keeping the Boer force stationary on the right bank of the river.

The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts: BLOEMFONTEIN March 30, 2 55 p. m.—Owing to the activity of the enemy on our immediate front and their hostile action towards the Burghers who surrounded us, I found it necessary to drive them from some kopjes they had occupied near Kaasre siding station, a few miles south of Brantford. The operation was successfully carried out by the seventh (Duke's) division assisted by the first and third cavalry brigades, under Generals French and Legally, and a regiment of mounted infantry. The enemy retreated to Brantford and our troops now hold the kopjes. Our casualties were: British, 1 killed, 10 wounded; Boers, 1 killed, 10 wounded; 100 missing. 3.

A despatch from Bloemfontein dated March 31 says: In yesterday's fight, many regiments received their baptism of fire and showed splendid coolness. We have secured a fine natural position facing the huge plain before Brantford. Kipling was present during the fight.

A despatch on Friday from Pretoria says that General Joubert's funeral took place there on Thursday. He was buried at Rustfontein, in his private mansion, with military honors. The captured British officers at Pretoria sent a floral tribute. President Kruger deeply mourns Joubert's death and at the grave broke down sobbing bitterly. General Louis Botha has been appointed to succeed General Joubert. It was he who commanded the Boer forces at Spion Kop and Vlak Krantz.

The second Canadian contingent have been ordered to join Lord Roberts' force at Bloemfontein.

The situation in the East, due to Russia's aggressive movements and her demands upon Korea, continues to be ominously threatening.

The Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg says the Government is considering a new scheme for more warships requiring an extra credit of many million roubles. The correspondent of the same paper at Yokohama says that Russia is pressing Korea for the lease of a piece of land outside the settlement of Masampo, thus setting an example which it is feared the other powers will follow.

The British Government has not received any news officially tending to confirm the rumor that no steps have yet been taken looking to concerted action upon the part of the powers, nor is there any indication that official circles regard the situation in China as serious, as it is made out in the press despatches. From all sources of information available to the British Foreign Office, it is ascertained that Japan neither desires or in any way near ready to dispute with hostilities Russian action in the Far East. A Yokohama despatch says M. Pavloff, Russian Minister to Korea, is pressing his demands at Seoul, and the Japanese Minister to Korea, Hayashi Gonsuke, is discussing the subject with him.

The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, April 1st: Broadwood's report has just reached me. It contains no details, but stated that he had lost seven guns and all his baggage. The estimates of actual casualties are about 250, including 200 missing. On hearing this morning that Broadwood was hard pressed, I immediately ordered French with two remaining cavalry brigades to follow in support of the sixth division. The latter, after a magnificent march, arrived on the scene of action shortly after 2 p. m. Broadwood's force consisted of Royal Household Cavalry, Tenth Hussars, G and H batteries Royal Horse Artillery and Picher's battalion of Mounted Infantry. The strength of the enemy is estimated at from eight to ten thousand, a number of which is not yet reported. The Chronicle prints a despatch saying all of Broadwood's guns, which were lost Saturday, have been recaptured.

According to one account the British loss of life was not great as most of the cavalry were in the fray before a shot was fired. Lord Roberts seems to have heard of Broadwood's plight very quickly and sent Colville's division at once to the rescue. Latest reports say that Colville arrived on the scene Saturday at noon and began shelling the Boer position so that there is some hope that the guns and wagons will be recovered.

A later cable states that the Boers have been compelled to retire, leaving the wounded. Broadwood's guns and stores have been recaptured. Among the British troops captured was a whole battery of artillery. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle, telegraphing on Sunday, and describing the loss of the convoy, says: "The Boers opened with a murderous fire. It was simply slaughter. The Kaffir drivers of the convoy ran away leaving their teams, and it was impossible for our men to hit the hidden enemy. Our gunners fought bravely, trying to save the guns, but our people were greatly hampered by the Kaffirs, who ran hither and thither looking for cover from the fearful fire that poured in on all sides. Meanwhile the enemy were not pressing Colonel Broadwood, whose mounted troops were completely surrounded.

The British showed magnificent bravery and the officers were quite cool and composedly directed the operations. The opportune arrival of reinforcements saved Colonel Broadwood from annihilation. The water supply was cut and the pumping gear destroyed, as well as the gold telegraph. One hundred wagons were lost through the cowardice of the Kaffir drivers.

THE QUEEN VISITS IRELAND. The Queen left Windsor on Monday evening for Ireland. She took the train to Holyhead, Wales, where she arrived at 9 a. m. yesterday. After replying to several addresses by local bodies, she embarked on the royal yacht "Victoria and Albert" and according to a Dublin despatch of yesterday, the royal yacht reached Kingstown at 2 p. m., three or four hours ahead of schedule time. Kingstown is a seaport town six miles S. E. of Dublin with a population of 20,000. On account of a steady down-pour of rain the royal party did not go ashore, but will do so today. It is estimated that Dublin's population will be swollen to a million to-day. The whole city is gay with preparations for Her Majesty and the Irish people are taking much interest in her visit, wearing red, white and blue and pictures of the Queen, Roberts, Kitchener, Powell, etc. A sensation has been caused by the announcement by James Egan, Sword-bearer of Dublin, that he will not take part in the ceremonies. Egan was for nine years a political prisoner. His withdrawal at the last moment hampers the arrangement somewhat.
