FRANCE.

On Wednesday the 20th inst., the cere mony of proclaiming the the election of President took place in the National Assembly ; M. Marrast, in a loud voice, though somewhat broken by emotion, declared Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, President of the french Republic, democratic and indivisible ; from that day to the 2nd Sunday in May 1852, and invited the President to all correspondence connected with the duties of his office, at his house in East Street, by the Constitution. Louis Napoleon advadced to the Tribune, and swore to remain faithful to the republic, and to forward its interests in all respects. He then read a brief address to the Chambers in a ONE HUNDRED BARRELS choice firm voice and said-" With peace and order our country can again improve-can cure its wounds, bring back the men that have been misled, and calm down persons animated by sincere spirit of cociliation .-I have called around me the capable and patriotic men, who in spite of the diversity of political origin, are ready and willing to devote themselves with you to the application of this conciliation, the improvement of the laws, and the glory of the Repub-
