The Fasters in Paris.

Paris Letter to London-Truth. The fasting match of Succi and Merlatti is what now amuses Paris. They both come from the fat and flat Lombardy, where the power of money to purchase creature comforts than anywhere else in Europe. Merlattir an artist by profession, and has learned to fast because he wanted to make fasting an art. He can equally well play the part of a Tanner or a Gargantua. There was never, perhaps, a stomach so enduring as his, either of hunger or of indigestible food. In the last respect it is well-nigh a match for that of the ostrict. He availais Elijah's long fast by indigesti.

Merlatti ir an it is well-nigh a match for that of the ostrich. He explains Elijah's long fast by indigestive bility of the cake baked on coals by the angels. It was a sort of "damper," like what Australian miners used to eat in the gold fever days. Merlatti is strong in the jaw to a bull-dog extent. He has those big bones and big muscles which show out through the thin fle h of his cheek, and which, with his prominent cheek bones and bright, small, sharp eyes, form as queer a physicgromy as I have ever come across. I could imagine a race of wild men of the woods whe had to live on tough roots and nuts hard to live on tough roots and nuts hard to live being like him. His power to syrtuch walnut shells and ingest them with gusto is remarkable. He ate two dozen walnuts, husks and all, and a large fat goose, with the bones thereof, on the eve of his fasting period. Merlatti was moved to the Grand Hotel be cause the air in the rooms where he was in the Rue Tronchet was poisoned with the crowd that went to see him.

Canadian Horses for the British Army. impression was produced by the Canadian Ished at London, "the experiment of importing horses from Canada for cavalry use would seem, so far as it goes, to have succeeded admirably. Of the eighty-three animals purchased by Colonel Ravenhill and Colonel Philips in the Dominion three only have been lost, and the remainder, though in their sea passage they experienced very heavy weather, were landed in the Thames in such a condition that they would have been fit at once for active service. The cost of these Canadian horses delivered in the Thames is less than the price gives by the Government in England. The purchasing prices ranged from £25 to £35. The drawback at present to the success of this plan of importing horses from Canada is the insufficiency of the supply. Colonel Ravenhill purchased eighty undoubted with grades and 500 miles journey to find one or two such animals as he wanted. There were about seventy men and 100 hores camped there. Samuel Johnson, one of the men recently speared by the blacks, was also there. I had a personal interview with him, and the information I obtained from him has since been verified by personal observation and also from conversation with at least 100 miners, many of whom have been on the field for mouths, others for weeks, and others again for nouncing the diggings a gigantic failure, that he with four others came overland from Port Darwin with a thoroughly complete outfit and thirty horses. His party commenced prospecting directly they struck the Ord River, and have been hard at it ever since. As they seasons, Mr. Johnson ought to be able to speak with some authority. Finland Startling Appearance of a Manufacturer Strange Sights That Are to be Seen in A Story that is Told Concerning a French possessed of an ext._ordinary coat of mail.
One day, so the story goes, Gen.—sent for a clever artisan in Paris and demanded of him in a theater foyer while a pretty actress was whether he would engage to make a coat of singing a risque song. Turning to a seedy possessed of an extrordinary coat of mail.
One day, so the story goes, Gen.——sent for a whether he would engage to make a coat of mail, to be worn under the ordinary dress, which should be absolutely sword and bullet proof. The man promised to do as requested, naming 19,000 frances as the price of it. The sergin was speedily concluded, and in due time the article was brought round to the general's house. The general took it up careully, examined it, and, turning to the man, old him to put it on. The man did as he was bid. "As you guarantee the efficacy of your coat, you will have, I presume, no objection to my testing it," dryly remarked the general, and before the astonished artisan could protest took a brace of pistols and discharged hem. Half dead with fear, the man stood the are, and, to the great credit of his workmanhip, with complete impenity. But the general was not content with one trial. He fired a second pistol at the back of the man, and discharged a fowling piece at him with similar effect, or rather non-effect. He loo tried in vain to piece the coat with a word.
