is fairly well. "Nothing to complain of?" asked the steward, quickly. "You live with Mr. Burchett. You get on with him?

He's-he's not easy to get on with to try him. But he has told you, perhaps?" he added, with a quick glance

"No," said Ralpl.; "that is"-remembering Mr. Burchett's words just "No, he has not told me though I gathered that he had had some trouble, trial."

"A terrible one," said the steward absently: "so terrible a one that he is entitled to your forbearance, Farringdon. Will you remember that?"

"I will," said Ralph; though up to the present Mr. Burchett has been most kind to me. He's not what you would call sociable or very cheerful sorts of men out there in the wilds, you know, sir."

The steward nodded

"Will you have a glass of wine?" he said, almost abruptly; and, without waiting for a reply, he got a decanter of sherry and, pouring out a glass watched Ralph, as he drank it, so in tently that he seemed lost and quite absorbed in the process.

Ralph put the glass cown. "No message, answer, I suppose,

A Simple Treatment That Will The Summer Complexion.

In one way the summer is a boon t the beauty seeker. There is nothing so beneficial to the skin as profuse perspiration, as it cleanses the pores of impurities in a way that no Turk-There are thousands of women with ish bath can accomplish.

To help this process, drink plenty of cool, fresh water. Don't drink ice water; it creates rather than quenches thirst, retards the digestion of food, and may cause serious intestinal troubles.

On the other hand, the end of the summer will find many women in despair over their complexion troubles. For one thing, it is sometimes difficult to get hot water for washing purposes All first class druggists sell a large in the summer. You cannot keep the pottle for 50 cents, and guarantee it skin clean by washing exclusively in to banish dandruff, stop falling hair celd water; indeed, if the face is really grimy, the cold water will "set" the dirt. #### On Second Thought.

BY JAY E. HOUSE. Without going into the moral ethic of the matter, the fact remains that the only way the average man can get enything out of politics is by selling his yote. The man who neglects to look in the glass in the morning can achieve the same general depressing effect by gazing intently at his photograph. No matter how many free blades ou get with a safety razor, it isn't

The first thing a man looks for is place to sit down. The first thing woman looks for is a mirror.

A woman can change her name at any time, but a man is compelled to wait until the legislature convenes. A man should not be judged entirely by his ability to assimilate punishment. His attitude in the face of vic tery is the better test.

A Nebraska man admits that he is 5 years old and never saw Lillian Russell. Would you construe that as a lamentation or a felicitation?

The man who refuses to do it in politics will often "grandstand" a little for the delectation of women. You can go around the world in 3 days, but there is no particular object in doing so. One of the recent poems is called The Wife of the Red Haired Man. If you are making a crazy quilt this undoubtedly belongs in it.

Then the years went by, and there gathered around This mystery, born of light. The clouds of the world were sighs and tears Hid the perfect soul in a realm o And the shroud of a darksome night.

But deep, deep down in a mystic dream, Where only the angels trod,

It lay enshrined in that night so black Till the angel of death should give it back Into the hands of God.
