"Tim" on Troubles and Discontent

This is a queer old town for sure and plenty fun there is in store for you if only you take stock how often she stops—our old town clock. And every one a grievance hugs, not only hugs but daily lugs his heavy burden to unfold on some poor mortal weal and old. No man in town is bright or gay, they all look weary for they say—'tis hard to live in "this man's town" though Peel is peeling priced down, and some there are who express a doubt that even Peel will peel 'em out. I went up to the House last week to hear a fluent member speak but even there a row held away, 'twas not in keeping with the day, for swarms played upon the scene, and the Park outside was all serene. 'Tis hard to start a first class fight, when children shout with keen delight, and through the open windows ring the "Ring-a-Rosey" children sing, 'tis better far to have debates in winter time at earlier dates. The Custom House looked calm and fine, a place where chums of mine recline, so in I went to see the Boys and listen to their whole soiled joys, but even here where people think the trials of life are on the blink, I met the same old discontent that through my frame the shivers sent. No one seemed happy with spirits higher, except our old friend William Dryer, this man would smile if earthquakes rained, and all his togs were long since pawned. Next man I met was a cute guy, who made a fortune on the sly, for sure said I this boy is glad, for he can't say that things are bad. But turnip-greens and salt that's slack, this man had pains up in his back. Along I went my weary stunt, and everywhere I heard a grunt, 'till looking up I spied a friend, and to his doff a smile did lend. He looked first-rats with wheel in hand guiding his car that looked most grand. He hailed her in, I got aboard, and soon in cushion soft was lowered. Says I, says I, unto myself, there's nothing equals plenty pelf. But even here King Discontent had taken charge of this grand get, that day he told me he had had, on some old stocks which he had had, and Sunday last four punctures had, and Wednesday week knocked down a lad. I hid them all good bye that day, and after tea went my old way, to meet old chums like Dinty Moore, who told me stories by the score, we smoked our pipes and laughed and joked, while Tucker my left ribs he poked. I learned the lesson people miss, that money don't mean endless bliss, for pleasure quits when poor folks stray from out their sphere like me that day. We often size up things quite wrong to be like Him we often long, but true content is never found, as long as you are overground.

TIM SHANAHAN.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—You are aware, no doubt, that this little settlement was badly swept by fire on the 2nd of June. We do not think, however, that it is generally known how badly off some of the sufferers are. They, in many cases, have lost the savings of a lifetime, and in this time of prevailing high prices they will find it difficult to get together even the beginnings of a home. We therefore ask for the help of the people of St. John's and the outports, and we will be pleased if you will open a subscription list in your paper. All donations received by you may be sent to the Hon. W. W. Halfyard, or to Mr. John Luther, sr., Treasurer of Fire Sufferers Committee, Bay Bulls Arm.

Thanking you in anticipation. We are, sincerely yours,

G. IVANY, Meth. Clergyman.
