Obituary.

MR. JAMES O'NEILL.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

Superintendent P. J. O'Neill of the Newfoundland Constabulary received a cable yesterday morning from Jersey City, announcing the death of his father-in-law, Mr. James O'Neill, which sad event occurred a few hours previous. James O'Neill was born in Bay de Verde sixty-nine years ago, and was the son of Mr. John O'Neill, one of those sturdy, industrious and successful Irishmen, who came to our shores in the first decade of the past century, and who conducted a large fishing business both at Bay de Verde and Labrador. He also prosecuted the sealfishery, and in his young days I always viewed with delight his tidy and beautiful little schooner the Native Lass and other schooners in which he was interested. He was indeed one of those hardy and energetic pioneer planters who helped to build up Newfoundland. After leaving school, the deceased served his apprenticeship at Harbor Grace with that famous skilled artisan, Mr. John Mitchell, who worked for ten years in London, England, and who had certainly no superior in his business on this side of the Atlantic. When that magnificent monument of ecclesiastical architecture, the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Immaculate Conception, Harbor Grace, was in course of construction, Mr. Mitchell was selected as the one best qualified to perform the decorating portion of the work, and the magnificent pillars which surrounded the dome, were put out of hand by Mr. Mitchell's foreman, the talented artisan, John J. Callahan, of the firm of Callahan and Glass, who lately passed to his reward. In all the artistic work performed in connection with the Cathedral Mr. Callahan was ably assisted by Mr. James O'Neill. In his intercourse with men through his business he proved himself a man of honor and integrity, sparing no pains in order that he might give the best value possible to the work in hand. Many examples of his handwork in St. John's, Harbor Grace and elsewhere are pointed to as standing memorials of the man who hated all shoddy work, and who steadfastly refused to slight any part of his contract, even though so doing would result in loss of money to himself. He was a man of whom it might be said that he had no enemies, but that all were his friends. He was a man who was widely and deservedly popular, and a great reason for his popularity lay in the intensely human character of the man—human in the absence of all pretence and pretension—human in his manful desire to take part whether of work or play—human, above all, in his humanity to man. After leaving Harbor Grace, he settled in St. John's, where he worked for some years, and twenty-five years ago he emigrated to the United States, where he conducted a large and successful business in Jersey City, N.Y., as a contractor. About two years ago he visited his Native Land, and although it was evident that his health was somewhat impaired, he continued his business until a short time ago, when it was thought prudent to send for his son (Rev. T. D. O'Neill of the Cathedral Harbor Grace) and his daughter, Mrs. P. J. O'Neill of St. John's, who were at his bedside to the last, as were also his devoted wife and two sons who resided with him. Thus surrounded by his loving and devoted family, fortified by all the rites of the Catholic Church, an example of resignation and patient faith in the designs of Divine Providence, he passed to his reward far from the land he loved so well. He leaves to mourn the widow (nee Miss March, sister of Rev. Dr. March, Bishop of Harbor Grace), two sons who resided with him, Rev. T. D. O'Neill of Harbor Grace, one daughter, Mrs. P.

J. O'Neill of this city, one brother, Mr. Edward O'Neill, cooper of the West End, two sisters, Mrs. (Capt.) James L. Keefe of Harbor Grace and Mrs. (Capt.) John Turner of St. John's. The well known planters, Daniel, Michael and James O'Neill of Bay de Verde are nephews; there are also many relatives and numerous friends to whom the Telegram extends its sincere sympathy in their bereavement. Eternal rest give unto him, O Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon him. Requiescat in pace.
