

PLAYS IN EGYPT

Sent to Wield Big Stick and He Is the Big Stick Himself.

HE IS THE MAHDI OF LAND

Unwavering Determination and Fatalism Will Appeal to the Natives.

Lord Kitchener has sailed for Port Said, and Egypt enters upon a new phase of her long and chequered career. Fully to appreciate the importance of Lord Kitchener's appointment at Cairo, it is necessary to recall the succession of events which have led to it. During her thirty years' history, modern Egypt has felt the influence of two civilisations. Under Lord Cromer she shed off the fetters of bankruptcy, regained her self-respect, and became commercially and socially solvent. Under the iron rule of "The Lord," as he was familiarly called, Egypt began swiftly to work out her salvation.

Unwavering determination was the name given to that rule, and a hazy definition of the great agent's administrative attitude it would be impossible to find. "The Lord" was a perfect example of the benevolent despot, and the fruits of his unflinching obstinacy in carrying out his plan of campaign in the face of apparently insuperable difficulties are to be found in the oft-quoted prosperity of the country over which he exercised so remarkable an influence.

Then came the accession of Sir Eldon Gorst to the seat of government, and with him came the first change. Theoretically identical with those of Lord Cromer, Sir Eldon Gorst's instructions in reality contained several modifications. The happy-go-lucky Egyptian, after twenty-five years of unquestioning obedience to skilled instruction, was to be allowed a free hand, to be given a chance to show how far he had profited by his lesson. With the results of that disastrous policy it is unnecessary to deal now. The experiment was a complete fiasco.

Nobody who has had any experience of the country will deny that in Lord Kitchener the foreign secretary has found an ideal man to deal with the difficult situation thus artificially created in Egypt. His knowledge of the dreary country of the Nile banks, with that of Lord Cromer, although it is principally in another and, perhaps in the present circumstances, a more useful direction. As one of the little company to whom the Egyptian army as it is today is due, he possesses an intimate and personal acquaintance with the excitable native of the province. This will prove of incalculable value to him in his new position. He controls, through this knowledge, what may best be described as a complete service of special correspondents throughout the country. In the event of trouble, say, the discovery of a plot, or the outbreak of a rebellion, the agent will not only be able immediately to put his finger on the probable instigator of the disorder, but also upon the man who will most readily understand the importance of an unconditional surrender of the whole village to suitable behavior.

Two attributes of a ruler the native understands best—absence of hurry and unwavering determination. Lord Kitchener never hurries. A calm deliberation informs his whole outlook. Such is only equalled by his administrative certainty of purpose. There is something fateful about his decision. "Whatever he decides is done," is a phrase completely accepted in the East, and Lord Kitchener conveys an unmistakable impression of inevitability. To the Egyptian he will be as fate—Kismet. And there is no appeal from that. The old phrase, "It is in order," will gain new significance on the banks of the Nile.

Lord Kitchener's Indian experience, as well as his career in Egypt itself, will, it is to be hoped, result in the old oriental being revived and in the welcome reappearance of the gold-broiled liveries and the familiar cry of "Oah! Oah!" which heralds the approach of one of the Great Ones.

"The Expected." And so the prophecy uttered by the late G. W. Steevens has come true. In his book "With Kitchener to Khartoum," he wrote:

"For Anglo-Egypt he is the Mahdi, the Expected." Unconsciously, for the most part, Anglo-Egypt has long expected her Kitchener, the mahdi, the one who will lead the nation to the new dawn. And at the height of her new discontent he has come. From this time begins the new era. That it will open in perfect harmony is certain. And an official of some thirty-five years' residence in Egypt, who has seen Kitchener will not have to use the Big Stick. He is the Big Stick himself.

Not Talk But Action Has Made Ours the Largest and Best Clothing Store in the City

IT IS EASY enough for any store to praise its own merchandise, and, to judge by the printed utterances of some stores, one would imagine that theirs was the only clothing worth buying. It is not what a store says, however, but what it does, that counts. You can't build a great business on a foundation of newspaper talk. You must produce the goods.

For over fifty years we've produced the goods to back up every claim we ever made in our advertisements. We've produced the sort of Clothing that has given thorough satisfaction. And, because we make all of it ourselves, we are able to sell it directly to the wearer without having to add the middleman's usual profit to our prices.

Consequently our prices are one-fourth to one-third less than those of any other store. This is why our clothing business has become the greatest in Canada.

We don't deny that you can buy good clothing elsewhere. You can—plenty of it. But you can't buy elsewhere any clothing as good as ours for anything like our low prices.

A little investigating on your part will convince you that you can spend your money for clothing to the best advantage at Grafton's.

Our variety of new fall styles is immense, and we can please and fit any man's fancy and pocketbook.

POWER PLAN SEEMS A GREAT HANDICAP The Owen Sound Businessmen Think That Present Scheme Is Unjust to Them.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Owen Sound, Oct. 12.—There is a great deal of lively discussion going on at the present time among local businessmen and others interested in regard to Niagara power, and the opinion is freely expressed that it is an injustice to ask Owen Sound people to pay between $50 and $60 per horsepower for the power they use, generated from coal, and then make them also pay their share in the cost of the great project, which is to be a rival in business. The declarations of Hon. A. G. MacKay has aroused the greatest interest here. The coming election is also keenly discussed, and merchants are particularly emphatic against the date selected. They think that it would not have interfered nearly so much with business had the elections been held towards the end of January.

GOLD IN YUKON Four and a Half Millions Production For Present Year.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 12.—Gold production of the Yukon district this year will be about $4,500,000, or about $250,000 in excess of the output in 1910, according to E. E. Stockton, of the auditor-general's department at Ottawa, who has returned from Dawson. Mr. Stockton had exceptional facilities for gaining correct information, as he audited all the Government accounts, including the gold royalties of 2-1/2 per cent. The Yukon Gold Company, controlled by the Guggenheims, had seven dredges in operation this past season, which has not yet closed, and were also extracting gold by other methods. Other companies are also doing considerable work. Mr. Stockton looks for a slow but steady increase of gold production in the Yukon.

TOURING IN AUSTRALIA Climbing Mountaineering During a Desert Storm—An Expert With Needle.

Brooklyn, Oct. 12.—A dainty, well-dressed, and well-known actress, Mrs. Annie Yeamans, who has been touring in Australia, was seen yesterday and today in the city. She is a well-known actress, and has been touring in Australia for some time. She is a well-known actress, and has been touring in Australia for some time.

"Well," she laughed, "I'm a well-known actress, and I've been touring in Australia for some time. I'm a well-known actress, and I've been touring in Australia for some time."

"Oh, yes, I came to America and I played with Mrs. Yeamans in her theatre here in New York. It was a stock company, and I was a second old woman."

"Second old woman—40 years old," she laughed. "I played the part of a star in every little thing. That's how things go on. And forty years ago I was a well-known actress. I have been touring in Australia for some time."

"Oh, the girls of today! They do things so hard. I was a star when travelling with Mrs. Yeamans. I was a star when travelling with Mrs. Yeamans. I was a star when travelling with Mrs. Yeamans."

"Oh, show my new dress! I'm going to wear it to the theatre. A handsome dress, violet, brought forth for me. It was a handsome dress, violet, brought forth for me. It was a handsome dress, violet, brought forth for me."

"But you didn't make a mistake?" "Oh, no, I didn't. I was a star when travelling with Mrs. Yeamans. I was a star when travelling with Mrs. Yeamans. I was a star when travelling with Mrs. Yeamans."
