and one cup of sugar, and add one-half cup of brandy, one-half cup of milk or cream, two egg yolks, and two egg whites, well beaten. Cook the mixture in a double boiler, stirring until it thickens like a custard, then pour upon the well beaten whites of the eggs. Set aside to cool before serving.

Angel Food.

Whites of 12 eggs, one and one-half measuring cups of sugar, one measuring cup of flour sifted four times, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and four teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Whip the whites until they stand alone, adding the cream of tartar and vanilla when half whipped. When stiff, stir in the sugar carefully, then add the flour, folding in thoroughly. Bake for 40 minutes in an ungreased pan in a steady oven. When baked, turn the pan upside down upon a clean towel, propping it up on one side to cool. The cake will slip out easily as it cools.

Election Cake.

One cup of sugar, one egg beaten, one-half cup of butter. Cream all these ingredients together, add two and one-half cups flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one grated nutmeg and a little salt. Mix well, then add a cup of seeded raisins dredged with one-half cup of flour, folding these in gently at the last. Bake in a loaf tin in a steady oven.

Salad Dressing.

It is well to make this of the yolks reserved from the angel cake. It will keep any length of time, and may be thinned with cream when wanted.

Yolks of 12 eggs, one and one-half cups of sugar, one heaping teaspoonful of mustard, salt to taste, two quarts of vinegar. Beat the yolks thoroughly, mix the mustard with the sugar, and add these to the yolks. Bring the vinegar to the boiling point, pour a pint of it on the egg mixture, heating all the time, then add all slowly to the remainder of the vinegar and stir over the fire until well thickened. Put into fruit jars, seal and keep in a cool place.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Story of "Stupid Pete."

Gumps was a giant whose appetite was as big as his body. From the top of his head to the soles of his shoes he was higher than two church steeples and when he ate his dinner he would swallow four dozen loaves of bread, two barrels of potatoes, one hoghead of apples, a whole calf, five dozen pears, ten gallons of milk, and nine quarts of chocolate ice cream.

Now the people who lived on the land at the foot of the mountain hated Gumps, for he would walk off with their goods whenever he wanted. Then every summer he would oblige the prettiest girl in the village to come to his gloomy castle to look a year for him. No girl ever lasted longer than a year, for the work was so hard that by that time she was too weak to do any more cooking, so he would put all the girls used up into his spinning room, where he had beautiful golden cloth woven.

In the village lived a boy who was known as "Stupid Pete" by the other lads. Pete was much in love with a pretty girl named Freda, and when Gump sent word that she must come up in June and cook for him the coming year, Poor Pete was in great distress and Freda in tears.

If Freda went that would mean that she would be worked down to skin and bones trying to fill the stomach of the giant, and that at the end of the year she would be hidden away from sight forever in the huge spinning room. And Pete did not like the idea at all. So he set to thinking about a plan. At last he hit on a scheme and went to Freda.

"I have a way I can get ahead of the giant," he explained. "It is this: I will dress in your clothing, so he will think I am a girl and take me to the castle. After I am in I will fix him, you can be sure."

So the next morning Gumps came lumbering down from the mountain and stood outside of the village for fear of knocking the houses over. Presently Pete came along dressed in Freda's clothing and holding a handkerchief to his eyes as if weeping. The giant took him up in his hand and started home.

"Now, you get busy and fix dinner," exclaimed Gumps as he put Pete down in the kitchen. "I am hungry as a bear, and want my ice cream frozen extra hard today."

So Pete built a big fire and worked for hours over a fine meal. Presently the huge pot of soup was ready and the giant smelled the steam.

"Here, I want a plate of soup right off," he yelled at Pete, whom he believed to be Freda. So Pete lugged a large bowl to the pot and poured it full of soup, but before he gave it to the giant he filled it full of red pepper. When Gumps took a spoonful he jumped and yelled for water. "I will bring it to you at once," cried Pete. But he did not. Instead he got a pound of red pepper and when the giant reached for the glass Pete threw the whole of the pepper right into his eyes. It hurt him awful and he started up in a rage to chase Pete, who dashed out of the door.

Now just at the back of the castle was a high cliff which hung over the sea. Gumps could not tell where Pete was running, as the pepper stung his eyes so, but he followed the sound of the boy's feet and Pete ran right straight towards the cliff—but he stopped just before he got to the edge.

But the giant did not see well and straight ahead he went in his rage and plump—down, down, down to the ocean below he fell. And is probably there to this day.

But Pete ran back to the castle and told all the girls in the spinning-room to go home, and that each could take with her a bolt of golden cloth, which they did. Then he looked in the giant's private lock-box and there he found about a bushel of jewels of all kinds that Gumps had stolen from travelers in the mountains. There were beautiful rings, watches and bracelets, and long strings of pearls.

So Pete filled a big bag full of the jewelry and ran down the mountain to the village. The first one he met was Freda, who was more delighted to see him alive than even to get all the riches.

So he was no longer called "Stupid Pete," but Mr. Peter, and when he married Freda they lived in great style for the rest of their lives.

The Origin of Soap

What would the modern housewife do without soap? There is little doubt but that she would be at a loss hard to realize. Yet there was a time quite a long while ago that there was no such thing as soap; not even a substitute, and the women of those days did washing and kept clean in spite of that handicap.

It is said that soap received its name from the town of Savonna, near Genoa. Tradition has it that the wife of a fisherman of that town, having heated lye of soda in a vessel impregnated with olive oil, thus accidentally discovered this composition. Many scholars believe that soap was unknown to the ancients; but there is documentary evidence in support of the claim that soap was known a long ways back.

FLOOD AT WINGHAM

Recent Rains Caused River to Wash Away Part of the Dam.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Wingham, May 31.—The authorities are busily engaged at work repairing damage that was occasioned to the dam as a result of the river flooding after the recent heavy rains. A dam farther up the river gave way, and this caused such a rush of water that some of the heavy timbers were washed away, and a lot of sand and gravel was thrown in. The water also moved over the roadway near the grist mill of Honson & Brockbank.

The temporary dike, which was built up after the flood in the spring was also carried away. There was about two feet of water in the Cruikshank's mill race.

Chief of Police Allen and Councilors Vanstone and Mitchell took charge of the work of repair, which will be rushed.

LAI D CORNER STONE OF NEW WALTON CHURCH

Large Crowd From All Over the District Attended the Ceremony.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Brussels, May 31.—A large crowd attended the laying of the corner stone of the new church of St. John the Evangelist, at Walton, and witnessed the interesting proceedings. The official duty was well performed by Rev. Dr. Turnbull, of Toronto, a former Huron County old boy, in the absence of Rev. Mr. McKay, moderator of the Presbyterian Church, Toronto, who was not able to be present. Rev. Mr. Lundy presided, and short addresses were given by Rev. Messrs. Turnbull, McLean, Lackland, McRae, Carswell, Ferguson, Wishart and Cranston, and Messrs. James Smillie, J. Shortreed, James Bowman, M. P. W. Proudfoot, M. P. W. H. Kerr and Reeve Govenlock. Good music was given by the choir. Supper was served in the basement of the old church to about 500 by the Ladies' Aid, after an exciting football match. The day's proceedings concluded with a big concert in the A. O. U. W. hall, the programme being given by Brampton musicians and local talent. The financial proceeds totalled over $450.

The church will be 51x81 feet, red pressed brick, with over 50 feet high; cement block basement, with modern Sunday school room. The auditorium will have circular seats. The edifice will cost about $12,000, complete, of which about $8,000 is now in sight. The opening will take place in the fall, Pastor Lundy and his energetic congregation are receiving hearty congratulations on the auspicious commencement of the work. Mr. John Hunter, of Cranbrook, has the contract for the work.

DEANERY OF PERTH CONVENED AT MITCHELL

Rev. H. M. Langford Chosen President For the Coming Year.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Mitchell, May 31.—The annual Sunday school convention and chapter meeting of the Deanery of Perth was held in Trinity Church and schoolroom, here, yesterday. The proceedings opened with a celebration of the Holy Communion at 10 a.m., taken by Rev. Mr. Langford, and the rector, Rev. J. J. Charlton.

The chapter met at the close of the service. A number of important matters were dealt with, and much useful information was obtained regarding the workings of the various parishes in the deanery.

In the afternoon the Sunday School Association met, and a splendid programme was provided. The rural dean was asked to take the chair for the afternoon. After Rev. J. J. Charlton's address of welcome, and a much useful information was obtained regarding the workings of the various parishes in the deanery.

He also gave an excellent paper on the introduction of the home department in the various parishes. Dr. Silcox conducted a round-table conference on teacher training, and the diocesan secretary, Rev. J. B. Howard, took up missions in the Sunday school.

Many good points were brought out. The last speaker of the afternoon was Dr. Silcox, who gave a paper on "The Sunday School Teacher," which left a lasting impression on his hearers.

An after-noon conference was called about 7 p.m., and with Rev. W. T. Cluff in the chair, the constitution of the association was presented and accepted, and the following officers were elected: Hon. president, Rural Dean Taylor; president, Rev. H. M. Langford; secretary-treasurer, A. J. Blows.

Superintendents of departments: Font roll, Miss Taberner; missions, Miss Winter; teacher training, W. J. Anderson; home department, Rev. H. B. Ashby.

Dr. Silcox was appointed deanery representative on the diocesan Sunday school executive committee.

Rev. J. W. Hodgins gave a short but appreciative address on Sunday school attendance, and Mr. H. Bonis took up the Sunday school as viewed by a layman.

At 8 p.m. a shortened form of Evening Prayer was said by the rural dean, and the Rev. T. J. Charlton. The special preacher was the Rev. C. E. Jenkins, B. A., B. D., rector of Clinton.

The convention was one of the most successful in the history of the deanery and this was due in no small degree to the kindly treatment received by the delegates at the hands of the rector and ladies of Trinity Church.
