Beside the Moldau's rushing stream,
With the wan moon overhead,
There stood as in an awful dream,
The army of the dead.

White as the sea-fog landward bound, The spectral camp was seen, And with a sorrowful, deep sound, The river floated between.

No other voice nor sound was there, No drum, not sentry's pace; The mist-like banners clasp the air, As clouds with clouds embrace.

But, when the old cathedral bell Proclaimed the morning prayer, The white Pavilions rose and fell On the alarmed air.

Down the broad valley fast and far The troubled army fled; Up rose the glorious morning star, The ghastly host was dead. I have read, in the marvellous hearts man,
That strange and mystic scroll,
That an army of phantoms vast and wan
Beleagures the human soul.

Encamped beside Life's rushing stream,
In Fancy's misty light,
Gigantic shapes and shadows gleam
Portentous through the night.

Upon its midnight battle-ground ! The spectral camp is seen, And, with a sorrowful, deep sound . Flows the River of Life between.

No other voice nor sound is there, In the army of the grave; No other challenge breaks the air, ...But the rushing of Life's wave.

And, when the solemn and deep church bell Entreats the soul to pray, The midnight phantoms feel the spell, The shadows sweep away.

The andicoty handtons feel the apell, The shadoos avery away.

Down the broad Valor of Tearsdar The apetual valor of the street of the shadoos avery away.

Our ghastly fean are dead.

"Temperance" Tippes.—The London Globe anys:—"It neems steetotalism" is a much less stern regime than it appears. In Durham and Northumberland the Good Templars have long extensively used a compound called "ginger cordial". This refreshing beverage having recently been sent by persons of an inquiring ministed an analytical chemist, it was discovered that "there was as much alcohol in one bottle of ginger cordial as in two of beer, and that it was almost on a level, so far as spirit is boneerned, with rum and whiskey. The spirit taken from one bottle burnt for an hour and eleven minutes, and then had to be blown out. This naturally caused great sensation; and the manufacturer of the cordial having been overhauled for his conduct, he while confessing that he puts a good deal of spirits into the drinks he vends, excused himself by alleging that "the tectotalism like it best so." The Globe adds:—"Perhaps inquiries of a like nature had better be made in other parts of the country. So long as their good faith is beyond doubt, the troublesome zeal of tectotallers is forgiven for the sake of their motives; but if this sort of ginger cordial is in common use, their propaganda is not an edifying spectacle. It is an hypocrisy Tarture himself could not have excelled."

FIRST FLOOR BEDROOMS.

If we had a house with a bedroom on the first floor, we would at once abolish the use of that room as a sleeping apartment, because we are satisfied that it is a wrong custom, it being much healthier to sleep up-stairs. Many a family of which the members were suffering and weak in general, have been restored to a vigorious and healthy condition by following our advice, which was to remove their bedrooms upstairs, to have their beds, summer and winter, exposed the whole day to the fresh air from open windows (except of course when there is rain or mist) and also to have during the whole night one window partially open, even in winter, so as allways to inhale the fresh, cool air from the outside, but using at the same time the precaution to have sufficient bed covering to secure warmth.—Prof. Van der Weude.

MILK-HOUSES.

Wood is not the best material for a milk-house; stone or brick is better. The best arrangement for keeping a regular temperature is to have the house partly below the ground and partly above. One of the best milk-houses we know of is built as follows; The lower part is four fact below ground, and is built of stone. Upon this the upper part is built of frame mine feet high. There is an attic above; and the walls and ceiling are lathed and plastered. The floor is cemented. There is one window on the north side, and a trapdoor in the ceiling for ventilation. The boards outside are tightly battened, and painted white. This is cool in the summer and in cold weather in the winter it is warmed by a stove. The temperature of the milk-house should be kept as near 60 deg. as possible the year round.
