125 MILES IN A ROWBOAT. REMARKABLE STORY FROM MISSION CITY.

Mr. John R. Wren, late Reeve of Mission City, B.C., is now 66 years of age and tells the following remarkable story: "Some years ago I was given up by the Doctors. I was so weak I could not walk across the floor, and was patiently waiting for death. I had paid as much as $25 a visit for a specialist who said I could not get relief. In this condition I sent for a sample of PSYCHINE. The first night PSYCHINE gave relief. The bleeding of the lungs ceased and in three weeks I was able to walk three miles before 7 o'clock a.m. and take the oversight of a score of men." This was in 1894, just 14 years ago. Since that time Mr. J. Wren has been Reeve of Mission City, and on August 17th, 1908, wrote: "I am now in my 66th year and weigh 236 pounds and do considerable business. Last week I travelled 125 miles in a row boat and slept out every night, and feel no bad effects from it. I owe this new lease of life to Dr. T. A. Slocum and his remedies."

No wonder Mr. Wren is grateful for PSYCHINE for it transformed him from a weakling into a hearty man and this at a time of life when most people are expecting the reverse. PSYCHINE is a wonderful Tonic and Life Giver. Living testaments prove this statement. PSYCHINE cures are permanent. THERE IS LIFE IN EVERY DOSE. We want you to test its power and send for a trial bottle at our expense. Mail coupon to Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, 514 Galt Avenue, Toronto, Ont. PSYCHINE is sold by all druggists and stores at 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

"The Difficult Art of Getting"

The fifth article in the John D. Rockefeller autobiography, in the current number of World's Work, is devoted to a description of some of the early struggles of the writer in what he terms "the difficult art of getting." The narrative runs from the time when Mr. Rockefeller started his commercial career by raising turkeys on a diet of curds, which he obtained free of cost from his mother until the period when he became a church trustee and raised $2,000 by personal solicitation to pay off a mortgage.

The turkey-raising experience, according to the reminiscences, still lingers lovingly in Mr. Rockefeller's memory. He kept a little book (still preserved) from early boyhood, which he called "Ledger A," and in this he used to enter his receipts and expenditures "as well as the small sums which I was taught to give away regularly." The turkeys contributed almost exclusively to the "receipts" side of the account, for, as Mr. Rockefeller says:

"When I was seven or eight years old I engaged in my first business enterprise with the assistance of my mother. I owned some turkeys and she presented me with the curds of milk to feed them. I took care of the birds myself and sold them in businesslike fashion. My receipts were all profit, as I had nothing to do with the expense account, and my receipts were kept as carefully as I knew how."

"We thoroughly enjoyed this little business affair, and I can still close my eyes and distinctly see the gentle and dignified birds walking quietly along the brook and through the woods, cautiously stealing their way to their nests."

The glimpse of his early business life given by Mr. Rockefeller dates along in 1855, when he got his first employment in the firm of Hewitt and Tuttle. He got $50 for his first three months' work, but the next year was promoted to a salary of $25 a month, and at the end of that period became bookkeeper at $500 a year.

After another year, in which a salary question was in dispute between Mr. Rockefeller and his employers as to a basis of $700 or $800 a year, M. B. Clark, who became his first business partner, came to Cleveland. Young Rockefeller had saved $700 or $800 and borrowed $1,000 from his father. His father was going to give him the $1,000 when he was 21, but let him have it a few years in advance on condition that the son should pay him 10 per cent. interest until he was 23 years old. So the firm of Clark and Rockefeller was started, with $4,000 capital, to do a general commission business.

Pretty soon the firm needed $2,000 at the bank. Mr. Rockefeller went to see T. P. Handy, the bank's president, and got the money, much to his elation. He returned the favor in later years by advising Mr. Handy to buy Standard Oil stock and financing the purchase of a larger amount than the banker would otherwise have been able to take. Mr. Rockefeller did a great deal more borrowing from various banks and from his father, who always exacted and got 10 per cent. interest.

"Many people," he says, "protested that the 10 per cent. was out of reason and that none but a wicked man would exact such a charge. I was accustomed to argue that money was worth what it would bring—no one would pay 10 per cent. or 5 per cent., or 3 per cent., unless the borrower believed that the rate was profitable to employ it."

The incident of raising the church mortgage closes the instalment. He was about 18 years old and had been a trustee of a mission church for a year. The holder of the mortgage was insistent upon the payment of the overdue obligation and threatened to foreclose. Finally, one Sunday the minister announced from the pulpit that the mortgage would have to be raised or the church closed.

Mr. Rockefeller says he stationed himself at the door and buttonhole every one going out, starting a campaign which he kept up for several months, until the $2,000 was paid in.

The Origin of Smoked Fish

An accident was the cause of the present smoked fish industry. It was a fire in a fisherman's hut that first revealed the possibilities of the great finnan haddock trade. The story is an interesting one to processors and fish dealers, and is told by a Boston writer in an interesting manner.

Boston is represented as the centre of the finnan haddock trade of the United States. About 200,000,000 pounds of fresh fish are brought to T. wharf every year by the three hundred or more vessels of the fishing fleet that land their finny treasures of the sea there. Some years when the catch of haddock is unusually large, the amount cured here exceeds 5,000,000 pounds. The smel depends on the size of the catch of the fresh fish.

To people dwelling away from the seacoast finnan haddock is a mystery. Finnan haddock is the Scotch name for smoked haddock, as that is what the fish is. It is a Scotch creation and it gets its front name from Pictou, Scotland, where it originated by accident, too, just as did roast piglets told of so succulently by the gentle Elia in his essay on that delicacy. Haddock, of course, is the diminutive of haddock.

Once upon a time, according to tradition, 200 or 300 years ago, as the story has it, a fish house in the town of Pictou, in which a lot of haddock had been hung up to dry, caught fire and was partly burned. When the flames were extinguished the haddock that remained were found to be thoroughly smoked. Some of them were cooked as an experiment, and they turned out to be such very nice eating that the business of smoking haddock was established there and then. Thus came into being finnan haddock, as the smoked fish were at first called, the name later undergoing the corrupt change to finnan haddock.

Boston is not only a great producer of finnan haddock, but a big consumer of them as well. The fish is low in price and very substantial eating as to quality, two things that no doubt account for the great popularity. It sells as low as seven cents a pound, and for the small outlay of twenty-five cents a fish can be produced large enough to furnish a good meal for a family of four, as a finnan haddock weighing three and a half pounds is considered a good sized fish.

East Boston, the chief seat of the finnan haddock industry of New England, has ten establishments devoted to the business of smoking haddock and other fish. A couple of others are located in South Boston. Oak sawdust is burned to produce the smoke by means of which the haddock are cured. This particular smoke is said to give the very finest flavor to finnan haddock. The fish are hung up to be cured while perfectly fresh, no salt or pickle being used on them. Thousands of haddock go through the smoking process in a single batch.

PHYSICIAN GIVES ADVICE

Tells Why So Many Suffer from Catarrh and Rheumatism.

A distinguished physician, famous for his successful treatment of catarrh and rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles, states as follows:—"Our climate being more or less damp and changeable, is bad for catarrh and rheumatism, and care must be taken not to let these troubles gain holdway. In addition, he states that a great many Canadians are careless in their habits, and to this as much as climatic conditions is due a great deal of the trouble. Insufficient clothing and improper eating will cause rheumatism and catarrhal troubles in any climate."

This eminent authority gives the following as the simplest and best treatment known to science, and to it he gives credit largely for his success: Fluid Extract Casarea, 1/2 oz.; Fluid Extract Carriana Compound, 1 oz.; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, 6 oz. Directions: One teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

The ingredients are all vegetable, and have a direct and specific action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, eliminating all poisonous matter from the system. Any druggist can dispense this, or you can buy the ingredients separately and mix at home by shaking in a bottle.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

(St. John Sun.)

Some years ago the members of the Federal House discovered that they, the said members, were inadequately remunerated for their exhausting and extensive services. They accordingly resolved, and that with extraordinary unanimity, to remedy the deficiency. Their action was unquestioned on the floor of the House but that was about the only place in the country where the voice of criticism was not heard.

There will, however, be no outside protest against the increase in the pay of the civil service. The increase in that department is absolutely essential if the country is to gain and retain the services of men qualified to do the important work that is required of the civil service. The size of the seasonal indemnity does not determine the ability of parliamentarians but the salary of the men in the civil service is a different matter. Meagreness there is a poor policy.

SENATE OF LILLIPUT.

The Way Dr. Johnson Outwitted the House of Commons.

Parliamentary bodies were long a great stronghold of resistance to the press. Reporters were strictly barred from them, and reports of their proceedings were sternly punished. It was among the triumphs for the right and for common sense which Franklin achieved that he caused the chamber of the provincial assembly of Pennsylvania to be thrown open to publicity. Nevertheless reports were allowed of either the Continental congress or the constitutional convention of Dr. Johnson's violation of the cherished privacy of the British house of commons is a classic story. He reported its debates without entering its sacred precincts, and in order to escape the severe penalties of the law he reported them without mentioning the body or any of its members by name. Setting up an imaginary "senate of Lilliput" and giving fictitious names to the leading members of parliament, he edited for years the readers of the journal which then boasted the "largest circulation" in England.

Receiving a few scanty notes of what was going on at Westminster, he elaborated them into a brilliant spread. He was, indeed, the illustrious founder of the humorous craft of rewriters. His discerning readers came to know not only that the senate of Lilliput was the house of commons, but that "Blefsu" stood for France and "Mildendo" for London; that "sprugs" meant pounds, that "Nardac" was the Duke of Newcastle, and so on. What his notes lacked his imagination readily supplied.

Never was the eloquence of parliament more brilliant than in Johnson's reports of the debates, in which he admitted, he took care that the Whig dogs got the worst of it, although Pitt himself must have felt mollified when he read the wonderful outburst attributed to him by Johnson on "the atrocious crime of being a young man." It is the best remembered of all Pitt's speeches, and it was written by Johnson "in a garret in Exeter street."

A SMART ENGLISHMAN.

The Story He Told of His Experience in "the States."

A tall, practical Englishman went over to "the States" the other day from London. He took lodgings at an inn in a small village, which shall be nameless. He had dinner, and among those who sat at the table with him was the waiting maid, whom he designated as "servant," but he received an indignation correction from the landlord.

"We call our servants, sir, 'helps.' They are not oppressed; they are not Russian serfs."

"All right," said the Britisher; "I shall remember."

And he did, for in the morning he awoke the whole house by calling out at the top of his voice, which was like the tearing of a strong rag:

"Help, help! Water, water!"

In an instant every person equal to the task rushed into his room with a pail of water.

"I am much obliged to you, I am sure," he said, "but I don't want so much water, you know. I only want enough to shave with."

"Shave with!" said the landlord. "What did you mean by calling 'Help! Water? We thought the house was afire."

"You told me to call the servant 'help,' and I did. Did you think I would cry 'Water' when I meant fire?"

"The explanation, it would seem, was satisfactory, and he can call the servants "servants" as much as he likes at that place now.—London Answers.

MORE LIFE-SAVING STATIONS.

More and better equipped life saving stations along the coast of the maritime provinces, probably the most dangerous coast bordering on the Atlantic, is expected to be the outcome of a recent tour of inspection of this province.

Although life saving stations, properly equipped and manned, are but of recent date on the Canadian coast, line great strides have been made in their development, and there are now twenty-one stations established, extending from the Bay of Fundy to the head of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The forthcoming improvements and extensions of the service will mean much not only to the native and United States fishermen, who frequent the mercantile marine at frequented the neighboring fishing banks large.

It is proposed to have central stations at St. John, Cape Sable and Halifax, where motor boats will be stationed. The construction of a station at some point between Dover and Sambro and also one between Devil's Island and Halifax is under consideration.

That has great cause to be encouraged, considering the power of God. The power of God is with thee. It is bound to be thine, by His promise; and if God be able, thou shalt obey whatever He hath commanded thee, so thou wilt believe this promise and use the means.—Thomas Hooker.

Not Very Flattering.

When the artist had finished his sketch of the stretch of woods skirting the suburban road, he looked up and beheld a serious faced Irishman whom he had previously noticed digging in a trench by the roadside gazing queerly at his canvas.

"Well," said the artist familiarly, "do you suppose you could make a picture like that?"

The Irishman mopped his forehead a moment and, with a deep sigh, answered, "Sure; a man c'n do anything if he's driv to ut!"—Argonaut.

Contradictory.

 "I can't say as he is, doctor. He'll eat anything and everything as long as there's anything to eat."

 "A man likes to hear himself talk so well," said Uncle Eben, "dat most conversation loids jes' like two people impatiently waitin' deir turns to say sum'nin'."
