money was nothing to the foresight which commanded us to keep the old church forever. It does more good to-day, perhaps, than the new building in which our people worship.

“In it our young men find amusement and manly games which keep them from the billiard and bar rooms of the hotels.

“There seems to be a charm about the old place, for they will go there when you couldn't get them to attend a prayer meeting.”

A great peace stole over the heart of Peter.

God had blessed his gift.
