Guarding the Least

When Lord Kitchener was the Sirdar or Governor of the Soudan, he was very strict in guarding the rights of the natives—the Arabs and the Soudanese. If any soldier committed an injury against one of these, even against the lowest and poorest of them, the matter was enquired into, and the soldier, if found guilty, was punished. And so careful was Kitchener in regard to this, that it came to be a proverb in the army there, "If you strike a native, you strike the Sirdar."

Now the Sirdar was not more regardful of the rights and welfare of the natives who were placed under his care, than God is of our rights and welfare. He has all our interests at heart, and not one of us is too young or too insignificant to be beneath His regard.

Jesus said, "The very hairs of your head are all numbered."; and again, noting that a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His and our heavenly Father's observing it, He declared that we are of more value in His sight than many sparrows.—Rev. James Aitchison.
