

and the attendance was rather small; but having named the speakers, it is scarcely necessary to add that the addresses were worthy of a larger audience.

On the evening of Feb. 13th, Rev. K. J. Grant, D. D., of Trinidad addressed a meeting of the Missionary Association of the College, at which Dr. Pollok presided. Although Dr. Grant was suffering from a severe cold and could only speak with great difficulty, yet his graphic and touching account of the work done among, and the reception given to the gospel of Christ by the East Indians in Trinidad, touched a sympathetic chord in the hearts of all. Such addresses, not so much of appeal as a plain sympathetic statement of facts, will do most to win men and money for the missionary cause. We greatly appreciate Dr. Grant's sacrifice when weary with travel and unwell in coming to us, and we wish him an invigorating happy furlough in his native land. Drs. Pollok and Currie, and Prof. Falconer also gave short addresses.

WE feel it our duty to advise students, when packing up at the close of the session, not to leave behind in their rooms books or papers upon which they place any particular value, as we understand there is great danger of such remains finding their way to the furnace room during the house-cleaning season. Our experience has been especially unpleasant. We have just had to replace, at a cost of two dollars, a book which disappeared last spring in this way, not to speak of a scrap-book worth to us many times that amount, which evidently shared the same fate. Books make good fuel, but are rather expensive to be used for that purpose.

As a pleasing evidence of the good results of the teaching of elocution in our College, it might be mentioned that some of our newly-fledged elocutionists have already been giving the city the benefit of their skill. It is uncertain whether Messrs. C. and R. will devote themselves exclusively to the business of travelling elocutionists, or proceed to make arrangements for the opening of a School of Oratory and Voice Culture next fall.—Meanwhile we wish our enterprising friends every success, and await with interest the appearance of their advertisement.
